Quotes Fenton as Saying Lindbergh Baby Is Not Dead

Means On Stand Says Lindbergh Baby Was Stolen By New Jersey Liquor Runners — Says Fenton Claims Baby Is Alive.

Washington, May 12 (AP)—Gaston B. Means testified in District of Columbia Supreme Court today that the Lindbergh baby was stolen by New Jersey liquor runners.

Continuing the story that he began yesterday in testimfying in his own behalf, Means said "Max Hassel" and "Max Greenberg" were responsible for the kidnaping. He added that he did not know the two men but that they had sold beer to servants at the Lindbergh house.

He said "Irving Fenton," described previously by him as one of those responsible for the kidnaping, had told him that Colonel Lindbergh as a practical joke on occasions had placed his baby in a closet and told the servants that the baby had been stolen.

This joke, said Means, gave the kidnapers the idea of how to take the baby. One of the members of their "ring" did go to the Lindbergh house with beer, picked the baby from its crib and went away, he added.

Means took up the thread of his story where he left off yesterday and told of meeting Fenton at Concord, N. C.

The former justice department agent was telling the story of his own negotiations between Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, estranged wife of the former publisher of the Washington Post, and the group he described as kidnapers. His activities resulted in the present charges that he and Norman T. Whitaker conspired to defraud Mrs. McLean of $35,000.

In his negotiations with Fenton, Means said he told the man he was interested in getting motion pictures of the Lindbergh baby for positive identification but that Fenton said that would be impossible.

"Is the Lindbergh baby dead?" Means said he asked.

"Absolutely not," he quoted Fenton as replying.

Kiwanis Ladies' Night a Success

About 125 members of the Kiwanis Club and guests enjoyably celebrated Ladies' Night Thursday evening, the affair being held at the Lake Katrine Grange Hall.

Nice refreshments were served there was an informal entertainment program and dancing to music by Zucca's orchestra, while those who did not care for the dancing were entertained at bridge.

The "Trio Originale," composed of Mrs. R. D. Gross, Miss Gladys Hopper and Miss Ruth Neal, entertained with a number of fine vocal selections and Barnard Joy led in singing songs and also put on a number of "stunts."

R. A. Lewis of Denver, Colo., gave some exhibitions of his wonderful power of memory. As the members and guests came in President Howard R. St. John called their names and later Mr. Lewis repeated every name correctly. When the guests were seated for refreshments Mr. Lewis turned his back to the company, after glancing over the assemblage and called the names of all in the order in which they were seated about the hall. He also gave numerous other examples of his ability to memorize.

Robert J. Service was chairman of the general committee in charge, other members being, Mrs. Service, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Styles, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. William B. Byrne, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Halverson, Mr. and Mrs Pratt Boice and Mr. and Mrs. Howard R. St. John.

Two Improving At Benedictine Hospital

Dr. Patrick Foley, 28, of 700 West 80th street, New York, and Miss Helen Zaldo of University avenue, Bronx, who were injured last Sunday in an aeroplane accident at Spooky Hollow near Leeds, Greene county, are improving at the Benedictine Hospital where they were brought following the accident. Dr. Foley suffered a fractured ankle and his condition is much improved. Miss Zaldo was more severely injured. She suffered a fractured leg, cuts and bruises and other severe injuries. The accident happened while they were passengers in a plane of Henry E. Lembke of South Cairo. In swooping down to get a look at a cabin in the mountains the plane failed to respond and crashed. The pilot claims the foot of one of the passengers became jammed in the controls.

American Proposal For an International Tariff Truce Adopted

London, May 12 (AP).—The American proposal for an international tariff truce was unanimously adopted today at a meeting of the organizing committee of the world economic conference.

The armistice was agreed upon after the representatives of the eight nations on the committee had been in session more than three hours.

Norman H. Davis, President Roosevelt's negotiator, came from the conference room in the foreign office, his face wreathed in smiles.

"It is good news," he said.

In the course of the negotiations each country participating had an opportunity to express views supporting the broad principles of the armistice and making it effective immediately.

Germany Ready to Agree About Tariff

Washington, May 12 (AP).—German readiness to agree to a world tariff truce "with minor reservations" was announced by Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, Hitler government representative, as he entered his final talks today with Secretary Hull at the State Department and President Roosevelt at the White House.

Schacht said it had been Germany's intention to do so all along and remarked he did not understand why so much confusion on the point had been created. He said Germany's reservations were minor compared to those of Great Britain and France.

He indicated that his country's agreement to a truce soon would be made known formally. He did not state what the reservations were. Great Britain and France have both specified provisions designed to enable them to raise tariffs to meet depreciation of currencies.

Will Set No Limit On Beer License

Albany, N. Y., May 12 (AP).—The state beer board will issue licenses to drinking places without regulating the number to be allowed in any community, Chairman Edward P. Mulrooney has announced.

"The board sees no present need for setting a limit on the number of licenses," Mulrooney told members of the county control boards who conferred with the state board yesterday.

"My personal view is that there will not be too many applications for licensing of drinking places. The license fees, the bond that is required, the deductions that must be made to meet the one per cent sales tax on whatever is sold, and other requirements stand in the way."

The state board again withheld its decision as to whether bars will be permitted.

Saugerties Woman Killed in Auto Crash

Milton, Mass., May 12 (AP).—The second of three women critically hurt in an automobile accident at Canton Tuesday died today. She was Mrs. Alice Corse of Saugerties, N. Y., companion of Mrs. Ella Samson Adams, prominent Boston social registerite, who died yesterday and of Mrs. Carlos Samson, sister-in-law of Mrs. Adams who is still in a critical condition at Canton, as a result of her injuries.

Three women were riding in Mrs. Adams's beach wagon when that vehicle was struck by a truck which plunged down a steep hill, with a broken steering gear.

Herzog's Get Third Carload of Paints

Somebody must be doing a lot of painting, varnishing and wall decoration in Kingston and vicinity this spring, if the amount of business done by the Herzog Hardware and Paint Co. in these goods can be taken as a criterion.

The Herzog Company has just received its third carlozd of Benjamin Moore paints, varnishes and muresco. This means that so far this spring the company has received shipments totaling seventy tons of the Moore products.

Benedictine Hospital Celebrates on Sunday

National Hospital Day Exercises to Be Held at the Hospital Sunday Afternoon—Addresses Planned by Number of Prominent Kingstonians.

National Hospital Day will be observed with appropriate exercises on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Benedictine Hospital, and a very interesting and entertaining program has been arranged for the occasion. All babies who were born at the hospital within the past two years are invited and will be the guests of honor.

The Very Rev. John J. Stanley, president of the hospital, will preside, and addresses will be delivered by Acting Mayor Conrad J. Heiselman, Francis E. O'Connor, M. D., chief of the obstetrical department, the Rev. Dr. Lucas Boeve and Dr. Mark O'Meara, chief of the surgical department.

During the afternoon Mrs. Floyd Rich will sing solos, and an orchestra will render an appropriate program of music.

This annual event at the Benedictine Hospital is always looked forward to with much interest by the general public. There has been a large number of babies born at the hospital during the past two years, and it is expected that the majority of the babies and their parents will attend the exercises.

During the past two years many improvements have been made to the Benedictine Hospital and today it is one of the leading hospitals in the Hudson Valley.

Sunday afternoon it is expected that there will be a very large attendance and the guests of the day will be welcomed by a reception committee consisting of the Benedictine Sisters, staff of the hospital and members of the Ladies' Auxiliary who will conduct visitors through the various departments of the hospital. Refreshments will be served. Souvenirs will be given to each baby born at the hospital during the past two years.

WALL STREET LEADERS TO TESTIFY IN MITCHELL CASE

New York, May 12 (AP).—A long list of Wall Street's mighty men will be called in the government drive to convict Charles E. Mitchell on a charge of evading $858,429 income taxes.

Federal Attorney George Z. Medalie disclosed this late yesterday at the trial of the square-jawed, gray-haired former head of the National City Bank.

Men of "substance and prominence" would be called, he said.

Three sore throats made a gap in the trial today. It was put over until Monday because Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard, Defense Counsel Max D. Steuer, and Medalie all have throat infections.

The lawyers' ailment was so serious that it reduced them to whispers yesterday during a long struggle to select a jury. Last night the jury—with a coffee merchant as foreman—was completed.

SCHOOLWOMEN'S CLUB HELD LAST MEETING

The Schoolwomen's Club held its final meeting of the year at the Governor Clinton Hotel, Wednesday evening, May 10.

Mrs. F. B. Preble of Chicago, president of the department of class room teachers of the National Education Association was the guest speaker. Her talk on the work done by her department in the interest of classroom teachers and an explanation of the present conditions in the schools in Chicago were most interesting.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Frieda Hayes; vice-president, Marguerite L. Cordes; secretary, Marianina Gorham; treasurer, Marion Zimmerman.

GANDHI TOO WEAK TO MOVE ON FIFTH DAY OF HIS FAST

Poona, India, May 12 (AP).—The Mahatma Gandhi began the fifth day of his projected three weeks' fast today too weak to move without being carried.

Fears that he may die increased since he is determined the fast protesting the treatment of the lowest Indian caste, the "untouchables," will not end before noon May 29.

He was too weak today even to raise his arms to operate his ever-present spinning wheel. His physician said he has failed in health more rapidly than was expected.

SHIPMENT OF CATTLE INTO STATE VIRTUALLY STOPPED

Albany, N. Y., May 12 (AP)—New York State's embargo against the importation of cattle from other states, unless they come from herds certified to be free from Bang's disease, has virtually stopped the shipment of cattle into the state, Commissioner Charles H. Baldwin of the Department of Agriculture and Markets told the State Council of Agriculture yesterday.

Paid $10 Fine

Carmine Monnello, 18, of Port Ewen, who was committed to the Ulster county jail for ten days by Justice H. E. McKenzie, in default of a fine of $10, paid his fine on Thursday and was released. He was charged with third degree assault.

President Offering Jobs in Forest Work Camps to Veterans

Plans to Allow 25,000 Unemployed War Veterans Join Conservation Army—Study Plans for Immediate Payment of Soldiers' Bonus.

Washington, May 12 (AP).—Jobs in forest work camps have been offered by President Roosevelt to unemployed war veterans, many of whom are encamped here now demanding bonus payment.

The chief executive directed Robert Fechner, head of the project, to prepare regulations which would admit 25,000 to the administration's forest conservation corps.

At the same time the President and Lewis W. Douglas, budget director, conferred with Democratic leaders in Congress on the possibility of action at this session on a measure for immediate payment of the bonus. No conclusions have been reached.

Police estimated that 800 former soldiers have arrived here as part of the 1933 bonus-seeking army. The peak number last year, police said, was 18,000.

The two rival groups of leaders, striving for control of the present movement were as far apart as ever today.

About 550 veterans, including 200 who arrived late yesterday from New York city, were housed by the government at Fort Hunt, across the Potomac from Washington. Another group of about 200, whose numbers were swelled slowly by arrival of individuals camped last night under the leadership of Harold Foulkrod in a vacant lot back of the Washington Auditorium.

Foulkrod and his men, despite the fact that they have had to sleep in the open beneath rain-laden skies, have refused to join the group at Fort Hunt, charging the latter are "Communist-connected." Arrangements for the veterans at Fort Hunt were made by the War Department and the Veterans Bureau on instructions from the White House.

Farm Inflation Bill Signed By President

Washington, May 12 (AP).—President Roosevelt this afternoon signed into law the massive bill to raise farm prices, giving him extraordinary inflationary powers and enabling easement of the agricultural mortgage burden.

In taking over this unprecedented management over currency, he had made it clear he was ready to use it "when, as, and if it may be necessary."

The legislation gives him power to increase paper money, reduce the gold content of the dollar and to fix a ratio between gold and silver.

The farm provision gives the administration wide latitude to control production either by acreage allotments or by the leasing of lands to withdraw them from production.

The refinancing of agricultural mortgages allows for a lower interest rate with a three year moratorium on interest payments.

Roosevelt Seeks Aid On Disarmament Plan

Washington, May 12 (AP).—Strong efforts are being made here as well as abroad to dissolve German objections to the British arms reduction plan and similar diplomatic suasion is expected to be employed by President Roosevelt in his forthcoming talks with high Japanese officials.

The President has taken disarmament as well as war debts into his own hands and is sparing no effort to bring about acceptance of the plan proposed at Geneva by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain.

Thus far Germany has been the stumbling block in the way of progress toward adoption, but officials here feel that Japan likewise will present objections in due time.

Home Relief Will Be In Old Armory

The new quarters of the home relief office, now located in the city hall, will soon be ready in the old armory. Men are now busy painting and cleaning up the rooms on the second floor of the old armory, and it was stated today that it was expected that the new quarters would be ready for occupancy in about a week.

The home relief office has been located on the third floor of the city hall since early last year, but it has been decided that it would be better to have both the home and work relief under one roof. The work relief has been located in the old armory for some time.

Sergeant York Delivered Talk

Famous World War Hero Denounced Effort to Repeal 18th Amendment at Meeting Held Thursday Evening in Albany Avenue Baptist Church.

Sergeant Alvin H. York of Tennessee, famous hero of the World War, delivered an interesting address in the Albany avenue Baptist Church on Thursday evening when he denounced efforts being made to repeal the 18th Amendment to the Constitution. The sergeant was welcomed to the church by the pastor, the Rev. Arthur S. Cole, and introduced to the audience by the Rev. Dr. Lucas Boeve, pastor of the First Dutch Church.

Sergeant York said that he had been engaged in a fight against intoxicating liquor since 1914, and knew of the havoc wrought by the old time saloon. He said that he knew many homes that had been wrecked and of many broken-hearted mothers whose sons were drunkards. He said that some who wanted the 18th Amendment repealed because it encouraged law-breaking were those who would ask to have the Ten Commandments repealed.

Speaking of his own early life the sergeant said that he had spent many wasted years because of going with the wrong kind of companions, but that he had seen his mistake and had decided to make a fight against conditions as he found them. He said that he used to think he could handle the stuff, but that he had learned differently. He spoke of his own three small sons at home and said he did not want them to face such a thing as the old time saloon.

He spoke but briefly of the feat for which he became famous during the World War, and devoted his address to an attack on the liquor traffic. He also spoke of establishing a school in an old alms house in the hills of Tennessee, and said it had started with only a few pupils but now numbered about 600 and had moved to a larger building.

Sergeant York's address was listened to with close attention by his audience.

18 YEAR OLD BOY CONVICTED OF SECOND DEGREE MURDER

New York, May 12 (AP)—A fight to overturn the verdict that convicted Harry Murch, 16, of murdering a 12-year-old chum was mapped by defense counsel today.

Murch stared stolidly last night when a jury—including ten fathers—adjudged him guilty of second degree murder for luring Willie Bender to a deserted house, binding and gagging him on a pretense of playing a game, and then plunging a knife into his heart. The state said he wanted to get even with Willie for "snitching."

Murch faces a sentence of 20 years to life.

His mother fainted in the court room last night and was carried out.

DR. BUTLER FAVORS ELECTION OF AL SMITH AS MAYOR

New York, May 12 (AP)—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University and a tower of Republican strength, was on record today as favoring election of Alfred E. Smith, Tammany sachem, as mayor of New York.

He hurled his suggestion like a verbal bomb into an astounded gathering of Republican district leaders and party workers last night, asserting Smith was a man Tammany Hall would not dare oppose.

Conner Blamed As Murderer Of Uriah Quick By Mary Fish In Testimony on Stand Today

Dead Man's Housekeeper Testifies Baessler Held Her in Kitchen As Conner Struck Blows—Heard Murdered Man Call for Her as He Was Being Struck, She Says—Helped Clean Up Blood After Affair—Saw Conner and Baessler Carry Body to Cellar Stairs.

Mary Fish, 44 years old, housekeeper for the late Uriah Quick, took the witness stand this morning at the opening of county court where Anton Baessler and Michael Conner are now on trial for the murder of Mr. Quick, and told her story of what she alleges happened. She is charged by indictment with murder, second degree.

Mrs. Fish testified that on January 22 she, Baessler, Conner and Quick were at the Quick home at Leibhardt. That while Michael Conner was eating a chicken dinner in the dining room of the Quick home she and Baessler left the room to go to the garage to get a jack to fix a flat tire on the Baessler machine and finding the garage door locked she and Baessler returned to the house and as she entered she looked into the dining room and saw Michael Conner with something in his hand. At that time Quick had his hands raised over his head. Mike was near the sewing machine and Quick at that time had blood on his face, the right side.

Mrs. Fish said she started to go into the room and Baessler told her to "stay back" and pushed her back and closed the door between the dining room and the kitchen. She said she heard Quick say, "Mamie don't let him hit me" and then there was the sound of a blow. She started from her position in the kitchen toward the dining room door which was shut but Baessler held her wrists against the wall.

Heard Quick Call

She next heard Quick say "Oh" and another blow was struck. Again Quick said, "Oh" and another blow sounded and then it was quiet in the dining room. Baessler went into the dining room and closed the door and she ran out in the yard.

She said that when she and Baessler came into the kitchen from the garage Baessler said to Mike, "What the —— are you doing, why didn't you wait till I fixed the tire, you crazy —— of a ——".

Baessler remained in the house 10 or 15 minutes in the dining room. She had left the kitchen door open when she ran out. She remained in the yard near a tree for about 10 or 15 minutes some 10 feet from the kitchen door. Then she heard a noise and saw Baessler and Conner leaving the kitchen. They were carrying Mr. Quick, Mike had him under the arms and Baessler had him by the feet, according to the witness.

They came out and placed the body on the stone step. Anton opened one of the cellar doors on the porch which had been closed and then she turned her back. Anton had let go Quick's legs while he opened the door. She heard a noise as though a heavy body had fallen at the bottom of the steps.

Baessler then said "Come on in Mamie and help clean-up."

She went in and assisted in cleaning up. In the dining room was a pool of blood near the sewing machine.

At that time Baessler said to Conner according to Mrs. Fish, "Why didn't you wait 'till I had the tire fixed" and Mike replied, according to Mrs. Fish, "What the hell did you want me to do."

She said she was unable to help wipe up the floor but cleaned blood off the wicker rocker.

She also found Quick's eye glasses by the wicker chair and gave them to Mike. He went out and when he came back he did not have the glasses.

At that point Mrs. Fish became somewhat nervous and a recess was taken for 10 minutes after which she continued her story.

Mrs. Fish when she first took the stand said she had last lived at Quick's at Leibhardt. She was married, both her children are dead. She gave her age as 44 and said she was separated from her husband now about two years.

A year ago she first met Quick when this son Myron took her there. A year ago last March she went to work for Quick. She worked until that June and then left and went home to Kingston. From the last of June until the last of September, 1932, she worked for Anton Baessler and after that she returned to Kingston and on November 4, she went back to Quick's to work and continued to work there until January 22, 1933.

She said she knew both Baessler and Conner. Her first acquaintance with Baessler was a year ago last March when she went to Baessler's with Mr. Quick. Conner she knew since last June when Baessler brought Conner to Quick's. She knew Mrs. Baessler and did house work for her at the restaurant. Baessler paid her $15 at one time.

Will Probe Mellon's Income Tax Returns

Washington, May 12 (AP).—An investigation of the income tax returns of Andrew W. Mellon, the wealthy former secretary of the treasury and ambassador to Great Britain, has been started by the justice department.

Charges made on the floor of the house by Representative McFadden (R-Pa) form the basis of the action. McFadden asserted that Mellon while in President Hoover's cabinet had been guilty of "a specific tax evasion" on approximately $6,700,000.

In addition to the McFadden charges, Attorney General Cummings said, a number of letters had been received from private citizens asking for such an investigation.

Cummings indicated he would handle the case through a special investigator.

"It is fair to say that the policy of the department is to investigate all cases where the complaint indicates that there is some substance to the allegations," the attorney general said. "This is a serious charge and has to be treated seriously and I hope fairly."

New Law to Ban Jews From Owning Land

Berlin, May 12 (AP).—The Prussian government will invoke on Monday a bold, revolutionary law to settle its most troublesome farm problem—heavy landed indebtedness.

The law will abolish large estate ownership, set up a new class of equally landed gentry, and will serve ultimately to deprive any person of "Jewish or colored blood" from ownership of farm land.

"Only a German citizen of German birth can inherit land as a farmer," the law states. "German blooded is he who has neither Jewish nor colored blood within four generations."

Under the law no farmer may own a larger tract than is needed for the support of his family; and it must be worked without the employment of outside labor.

Missing Girl Was Found Thursday

Mary Turck, 16, daughter of Nicholas Turck of 13 Willow street, who had been reported missing since Tuesday afternoon was located by Sergeant James V. Simpson of the Kingston police force on Thursday afternoon at 198 Washington avenue.

When the police were asked to assist in the search for the missing girl a general alarm was sent out over the teletype, but contrary to expectations the girl did not leave the city, and was finally located as stated.

This morning after a consultation with the family Judge Calloton turned the girl over to them.

Home Relief Asks Milk Bids in City

The home relief office in the city hall daily gives out orders for approximately 200 quarts of milk, and on Thursday it was decided to ask the local retail milk dealers to submit bids for supplying this quantity of milk during the month of June.

All bids must be filed with Superintendent Peter J. Halloran at the City Home on Flatbush avenue.

Mt. Marion P.-T. A. Met.

The Mt. Marion P.-T. A. meeting held at the church hall Tuesday evening, May 9, was very well attended. The new officers elected for the coming year are as follows: President, Mrs. Warren Myer; vice president, Mrs. George Gillison; secretary, Miss Nellie Myer; treasurer, Mrs. William Werner; historian, Miss Margaret Pinckney. There was a very fine entertainment given by the school children under the direction of Miss Myer. Everyone enjoyed it thoroughly and Miss Myer is especially to be commended for the children's splendid musical training. The meeting closed with a social hour, at which home-made ice cream and cake were served.

Minimum Wage for Highway Workmen

The minimum wage which may be paid, outside of cities, to laborers on highway construction and repair was announced today by Industrial Commissioner Elmer F. Andrews as 50c an hour in the counties of Nassau, Suffolk, Westchester and Rockland, and 40c an hour in the other counties of the state.

This determination is made mandatory by the Cauney Bill, recently signed by Governor Lehman (Chapter 733 of the Laws of 1933, effective May 3), which provides that the Industrial Commissioner shall designate a minimum wage for laborers on highway work done by the state, counties, towns or villages. It is pointed out, however, that rates paid for public works in the cities of the state are determined by the local officers of the municipalities and not by the Industrial Commissioner.

Mr. Andrews states that this legislation was necessary because last season some less scrupulous employers and their laborers as low as 20c an hour, which meant that the maximum amount which these workmen could earn during a 40-hour week was $8.

"The work for which such a low rate was paid was often done in sparsely settled communities, where no other labor was employed," Mr. Andrews says. "Therefore the State Department of Labor, under the prevailing rate sections of the labor law, which provide that the prevailing rate of wage for public work shall be established in each community, was powerless to establish a fair rate, and whatever pay the contractors chose to give the workmen automatically became the prevailing rate. In determining the rates now promulgated we consulted many representatives of contractors and labor who consider these rates fair to both employer and employe."

The new rates permit workmen to receive $20 for a 40-hour week in the metropolitan area and $16 for a 40-hour week in the remainder of the state.

WALES RED FACED AFTER SEEING SELF ON FILM

London (AP)—"It's embarrassing to see a picture all about one's self," said the Prince of Wales, after viewing the film "The Prince of Wales," which will be shown publicly on June 22, the eve of his birthday.

The prince faced the sound apparatus for the prologue. This will be followed by 6,250 feet of film—taking an hour to show.

The picture was prepared from 65,000 feet of film, 15,000 of which came from the prince's private collection.

Savants Renew Pre-War Parleys.

Basel, Switzerland (AP)—For the first time since the war an international conference on anthropology and ethnology will be held in 1934, probably in London. The decision to organize the gathering was taken here by several leaders in the science.

FAIR RUSSIAN EXILES DOTE ON AMERICAN HUSBANDS

Harbin, Manchuria (AP)—Some 4,000 exiled Russian princesses, baronesses and other high aristocrats, many of them possessed of beauty, but all with a minimum of money, are seeking husbands here.

Most of them prefer Americans. Newspapers quote them as saying this is not based upon the superior business or social positions of Uncle Sam's nephews, but to conviction that men from the United States make the best husbands.

"They are more considerate and unselfish, more affectionate and loyal, than other men," is the consensus.

George Hanson, American consul-general, has performed the marriage ceremony for a number of such unions. But he says the demand of the Russian women for American mates far exceeds the supply.

DETHRONED RULER FULFILLS BOYHOOD DREAM IN AFRICA

Nairobi, East Africa (AP)—Ex-King Ferdinand of Bulgaria, who lost his throne because of his country's defeat in the World War, is living in a little hotel room here.

"I have come here," he said, "as a scientist and traveller. I love the peace of Uganda and Kenya in this harassed world."

From childhood, he said, he had read books about African explorers and he had always wanted to tread their paths.

Although 73 years old, he is vigorous. He had just returned from a 3,000-mile motor trip, mostly over rough tracks through the bush, which occupied 17 days.

The ex-king is a keen botanist, ornithologist, and entomologist. His collection of butterflies and birds at Sofia is considered one of the best in the world.

Czechs Reduce Unemployment.

Prague (AP)—Jobless Czechoslovakians to the number of 42,000 found work in March, thus reducing the country's unemployed from 920,000 to 878,000.

South Africa To Vote May 17 On Puzzling Political Issue; Hertzog And Smuts Face Test

Cape Town (AP)—South Africa will sort out the scrambled pieces of a political jig saw puzzle May 17 in a general election called so the voters could give a mandate to the new coalition government.

Ranged side by side in the picture, after spending more than two decades in opposite corners, are Gen. J. B. M. Hertzog, prime minister, and Gen. Jan C. Smuts, the ex-Boer commander who for 30 years has done his best to build up this dominion of the British empire.

Roos Scrambles Picture

And, fighting for a place somewhere when the pieces are assembled, is "the lion of the north," Tielman Roos.

South Africa has never dealt with anything like this.

Back as recently as the tag-end of 1932, however, clouded its economic horizon, the country had a clear political picture.

Hertzog was prime minister of the nationalist government. Smuts was leader of the South African party and political enemy of Hertzog. On the appeal court bench sat Justice Roos.

Roos had been one of General Hertzog's most influential supporters. He is credited with having engineered a pact with the labor party that, in 1924, resulted in Hertzog's displacing Smuts as prime minister.

But later 1932 saw Roos doing a one-man scramble of the picture. He resigned the judgeship to preach two political texts: abandonment by South Africa of the gold standard and establishment of a coalition government.

Smuts Shows Strategy

Both things happened, but not just as Roos wanted them done. He approached Smuts first on the coalition idea, but came to no agreement. Then Smuts initiated a debate in parliament for a national cabinet to take the place of Hertzog's party government.

The move failed, 83 to 63, but the Roos crusade was gaining. So Hertzog and Smuts shaped a coalition with Hertzog remaining as prime minister, Smuts as minister of justice and second in rank and five from each of their parties in the other posts.

That is the government which the voters are asked to approve.

Roos, however, feels that the Hertzog-Smuts cabinet is a sort of subterfuge. So he has organized the "united coalition" party and placed 13 candidates in the field, including himself.

It is his idea to have a balance of power minority in the next parliament so as to neutralize any scheme Hertzog or Smuts may have of resigning and reconstituting party rule.

They Are The "Ins"

A tangled political situation in South Africa will come to a climax May 17 when voters cast their ballots for or against approval of the coalition government headed by Prime Minister J. B. M. Hertzog (above) and Minister of Justice Jan C. Smuts (below). Tielman Roos, who appears above, seeks to block any return of party rule.

BRITISH GOLD

Some 100 per cent Britishers are excited by the announcement that our government will not pay bond interest in gold. The decision to pay in paper dollars was criticised by Sir Stafford Cripps, former solicitor general, as repudiation, "contrary to every criterion of honesty." Sir Arthur Samuels declared: "The United States hoped to win the financial leadership of the world from London after the war; but with the American default on her Liberty Bonds, no one would again look to her for leadership."

Such heat on the part of our British friends seems hardly called for in a country which holds less than one per cent of the bonds in question. The question is essentially a domestic one, affecting our own investments. We own nearly all of these bonds. And our government can hardly pay gold abroad while refusing it at home. The criticism seems still less called for when one recalls that America has followed British example in ending gold payments. There is not only British precedent for it, but British judicial authority.

A British court recently ruled that a gold payment clause in bonds or contracts is not enforceable in Great Britain. According to the Judge's decision, as reported in the London Times:

The law had withdrawn gold from circulation, and imposed the burden on any holder of gold coins that they might be called in at their nominal value and not at their bullion value. That law also directed that a liability to pay any money should be satisfied according to the coins which were current and legal tender. Gold coins were not now available, and in their place, and representing sterling, were notes of the Bank of England.

We have not heard of any American creditors squawking about that. And notes of the United States Treasury are probably as good as notes of the Bank of England.

MILLIONS FOR SLUMS.

There is more talk, of a practical nature, about slum elimination. It proposes a combination of relief work, business revival and scientific construction for the future. This might be the salvation of industrial cities.

Discussion centers for the present in the "American Ruhr," the great, densely populated manufacturing region stretching from Pittsburgh to Detroit, containing several large cities. It has been harder hit by the depression than any other area in the country. Its cities are cursed by slums and other blighted districts. If the cities are to survive as places for large aggregations of human beings to live, work and play, in a state of civilization for which the world is ready, there will have to be a good deal of rebuilding. And this is a good time for it. Nothing helps more to revive business than construction work.

Cleveland, which stands in the middle of the region, and greatly needs reconstruction, has her plans farther advanced and her forces better organized than any other community so far. She is submitting a huge pioneer project of this sort to the government, hoping for an R. F. C. loan of several millions to start with. It is suggested that $300,000,000 could be profitably spent on such work in western Pennsylvania, Ohio and southern Michigan. If this work once starts, there will soon be plenty of other applicants.

CHICAGO'S PRIDE.

Chicago is rather proud of itself because of a recent decision. It has been planned all along to have the official opening of the Century of Progress Exposition on June 1. Leaders wanted to have President Roosevelt there on the opening day. He could not be present on June 1, so without any fuss or hullaballoo it was announced that the official opening would take place on May 27.

Many opening days of World's Fairs, Chicagoans point out, have been postponed because the shows were not ready on time. This, therefore, is the first time on record when an opening date has been moved up. When the great day comes, they add, it will be a real opening, with the buildings finished and the exhibits all on hand—not an array of unfinished structures and a lot of empty places for exhibits still en route. That remains to be seen. Much is yet undone.

Great Britain has just made a new deal with Argentina. The latter is expected to give her additional advantages in that market, where she is already the most favored importer. Canada presses a new trade treaty with France, which has been under negotiation for several months. It will soon be introduced in the Parliament at Ottawa. Both of these steps are taken since the visit of the British, Canadian and French statesmen to Washington. Others of similar nature are in progress, as the world economic conference draws near. It looks to Americans as if the other countries are trying to gain special trade advantages so as to have greater bargaining power when we all get around the big table in London. The other countries, however, think we ourselves went off the gold standard for that same purpose.

A MINING DISCOVERY

The whole scientific world is watching with deep interest the opening up in Canada of what is called the Bear Lake Mining District, because it is likely to mean that a great amount of suffering will be relieved, and thousands of lives saved to the world by the discovery of a huge deposit of pitchblende.

It is from pitchblende that radium is obtained.

At present it is being brought out by airplane to the railroad, and carried some thousands of miles to a radium plant in Ontario.

Why does this discovery mean so much to humanity?

It means that radium should soon be available for cancer sufferers throughout the entire world, whereas at present the supply is limited and the price beyond the ability of hospitals to pay.

It has now been definitely proven that where the radium can be applied to the cancer within a reasonable time after it is known to be cancer, a cure is possible in nearly every case.

This has been very definitely shown in a series of cases at the Howard A. Kelly Hospital, Baltimore. Dr. Edmund Kelly reports some hundreds of cases of cancer of the lip treated from 1921 to 1929. Of these, 96 per cent were in the lower lip and 93 per cent were in men. Smoking, exposure to weather and to intense sunlight were some of the causes as most of the cases were among farmers, sailors, soldiers and outdoor workers.

Why is radium to be preferred to the knife?

As mentioned before radium has a "selective" action in that it selects the cancer cells and destroys them, and does no harm to the healthy cells around the cancer.

Dr. Kelly states that in those cases of cancer of the lip where there are no swollen glands—which would show the cancer to be spreading to some distance from the lip—he would recommend radium as better than removal by surgery for four reasons.

1. The results and percentages of cures are excellent—over 93 per cent two year cures, and 81 per cent five year cures.

2. The appearance of the face and the use of the mouth are better.

3. There is a vast saving in expense and time to both patient and hospital, as the patient does not need to remain in hospital at all.

4. The patient can go about his usual work thus losing no time.

The big point to be remembered of course is that radium must be applied only by those skilled in its use.

The White Cockatoo

by Mignon G. Eberhart

Synopsis: Lori Lorn, owner of the gloomy, lovely French hotel has at last crumpled Sue Tally's resistance to such an extent that she has consented with an attempt to secure the return which entitles her to obtain a large fortune. She agrees to locate Arnaud. But wonder Jim Sundeen and David Lorn, the detective, want would a great like Father Robert were known that would have led the killer to murder him?

Chapter 35

SUE'S PREDICAMENT

"WELL," said Lorn slowly, "there are two hypotheses. Either he was an honest priest who accidentally knew too much about one of the other murders and his knowledge was so dangerous and so incriminating that he had to be silenced at once; or he was, as Mr. Sundeen thinks, no priest at all."

"If not a priest, then what?"

Lorn shrugged.

"If not a priest, then certainly a conspirator."

"Remember his searching Miss Tally's room."

Lorn looked at me soberly.

"You are sure that he carried nothing in his hands when you saw him come from her room?"

"I saw nothing."

Lorn turned to Sue.

"And you are sure nothing was gone?"

"Yes," said Sue at once. Her eyes met Lorn's steadily, and her expression did not change, although it seemed to me that Lorn's gaze became sharper.

"If he had come upon the object—token—whatever it is that is to prove your identity," ventured Lorn speculatively and rather guardedly, his eyes still searching Sue's face, "then that would provide a motive for his murder."

"Of course," said Sue briefly. "Although that would presuppose several different people trying to obtain the—token."

"Two, at least," said Lorn. "Not counting your eventual substitute."

Sue shivered. "I think now you are both right," she said. "I will go to the police this afternoon."

There was a short silence.

The lounge was empty except for us, and bare and chilly. Above us were those blank gallery railings, and all around us the secretive dark old hotel.

The Lovachiems were in the lobby. I had watched them carefully during the morning's inquiry and excitement, but they were guarded, both of them—guarded and wary and inscrutable, although Marcus looked frightened under his mask and glistened more than usual.

But Grethe was cool and calm, her face set in properly and innocently shocked lines, and her green eyes shining and cool and unfathomable.

Mrs. Byng had promptly—or as promptly as the police would permit—retired with her shawls and her temperament to her own room, where she was, I had no doubt, well barricaded.

Marianne, no longer hysterical but dark and sullen and remote, was in some nether region with, I supposed, the chattering cook.

ONLY the cockatoo remained diabolically unperturbed. As I watched he flopped awkwardly to the floor from Grethe's graceful shoulder, waddled along it to the door to the courtyard, and paused to examine with handsomely flared crest and a knowing and speculative eye the boot heel of a policeman who stood there. He opened his curved beak dubiously, paused to scratch with vigor under one wing, and I said thoughtfully:

"If we only knew exactly where the danger lies."

"When we discover that, we will have the murderer," said Lorn. "It may not be as complete a mystery as you seem to think. Things have a way of breaking suddenly."

"Perhaps. But yesterday I felt sure the man pretending to be a priest—"

"You don't know yet that he wasn't," said Lorn softly.

"Do you want to bet that the police won't discover his papers to be forged?"

"Oh—no," said Lorn temperately. "He probably was no priest. But it's better to be quite sure of these things before resting a case on them."

"Well, in any case, I felt he was the murderer. Now—I don't know—someone certainly killed him. And there's the nicotine again, to link it with the murder of the man called Stravsky."

"Yes," said Lorn slowly. "If the priest had taken anything yesterday from Miss Tally's room we might come nearer to understanding the affair."

SUE said nothing. Presently he continued:

"But since Miss Tally assures us that he found nothing—" He shrugged again and left the obvious conclusion unspoken.

"In the meantime," I reiterated, "the thing to do is to go to the police and tell them all that we know and beg them to permit Miss Tally to leave."

"Unless," said Sue rather tremulously, "it would only be to take myself also away from protection."

"I'll go with you," said Lorn.

"Oh, I'm not changing my mind again," said Sue at once. "Surely Grethe was cool and calm.

you can intervene for me, Mr. Lorn, with Francis, if he disapproves."

"I can try," said Lorn rather dubiously. "But it's the only thing for you to do, Miss Tally. You are in a position of great danger. I'm afraid I made a grave mistake in backing you up in the first place. It hasn't been fair to the police, and your safety lies in their discovering the criminal. And they should have every facility to do so."

"That is," he corrected himself somewhat hastily, as the meaning of the expression in Sue's little white face reached him, "at least to some extent your safety lies in their discovering the criminal. Our only hope is to try it, though I fear the police will make you stay, even after they know the story."

There were voices in the lobby: someone had just entered from the outside. We could hear Grethe's fluent French, then some scattered English phrases in a strange voice. It was a man's voice.

I followed Lorn's blank gaze into the lobby: a man stood there. A stranger; the light from the window was full on his face. He seemed to be explaining something in English to Grethe and Marcus, for we caught a brief English word or two.

Then, with all the effect of a curtain in a theater, Grethe appeared suddenly in the door of the lounge. She said to Sue:

"Your brother has come. He—" she turned toward the man who somewhat hesitatingly had followed her—"this is Miss Tally, monsieur."

Imposing and impressive, once a monument of Tsar Alexander III, ruler of Russia, in Petrograd, the monument today stands in mockery labeled the iron scarecrow of Russia, in the Square of the Revolution, Leningrad, renamed since the Russian revolution.

The Communistic inscription now on the once respected memorial to the former tsar reads: "Scarecrow. My son and my father were executed and I reap the harvest of immortal shame. I am standing here as a cast-iron scarecrow for the country which has forever thrown off the yoke of despotism."

Strange as it seems, work with the brain and eyes is as tiring as muscular activity. It has been shown by medical research that nowhere in the body does the blood flow faster than through the eye retina. Next to the eye, the brain requires the fastest blood supply, according to Dr. Stanley Cobb of Harvard, the brain of a sedentary brain-worker uses up more energy when he is at his desk, than do his arms and legs when he is exercising.

Control of Hollyhock Rust and Rose Mildew

During the past year or two the Farm Bureau office on John street has been receiving so many requests in regard to the control of hollyhock rust and rose mildew that W. J. Clark, in charge of the Farm Bureau Spray Information Service, has prepared the following to assist those interested in identifying these fungus diseases and telling how they may be controlled. Diseases of biennials and perennials seem to be getting more troublesome each year, but rust on hollyhocks and mildew on roses were particularly so during the summer of 1932.

Hollyhock Rust.

In rare instances individual hollyhock plants appear to be resistant to rust, but generally speaking all varieties are susceptible. The orange-brown pustules on the undersides of the leaves are typical symptoms of the disease. These rust pustules may occur to a lesser extent on the upper leaf surfaces, stems and green flower parts. Microscopic spores or seeds formed by the rust fungus are carried by splashing rains or air currents to nearby healthy leaves, where they germinate in the presence of moisture and cause further infection. As the disease progresses through the summer practically all of the leaves on infected plants may be killed.

Any effort to control hollyhock rust should start at once. As soon as the crown begins to put forth new leaves, they should be examined carefully as they expand, for rust pustules. Such examination should be made every few days. Every leaf and leaf stalk showing pustules should be cut away and burned. At the same time the small weed plant known as mallow (Malva rotundifolia), should be removed and destroyed. This weed is also susceptible and may be responsible for new infections during the season.

If these preventive measures are promptly and carefully conducted, the hollyhocks will be given a start in the spring, free from the rust. Unless your next door neighbor has a source of disease infection in his garden, it may be possible to maintain your plants in a healthy condition for the rest of the season without further attention.

To make certain that the hollyhocks will be free from rust this year, it would be well to apply dusting sulphur every week or ten days until the flowering begins. Be sure to dust both the lower and the upper sides of the leaves. Good grades of dusting sulphur can usually be purchased at any local store. A small hand duster suitable for making these applications can also be obtained at a reasonable price. The dust to be most effective, should be ground sufficiently fine so that at least 90 per cent of it will pass through a wire screen having 200 meshes to the inch. For those who object to the yellow color of ordinary sulphur, it is suggested that green dusting sulphur can also be purchased. This is just as effective and will not show on the foliage of the plants after it is applied, one objection being that it is difficult to tell how much of the plant has been covered.

Rose Mildew

Roses affected with mildew show white or gray moldy patches on the leaves, canes and buds. The microscopic spores, or seeds, formed by the fungus on these moldy areas, are carried by winds to nearby roses. Here they germinate, if sufficient moisture is present and cause further infections.

The disease can be controlled by spraying or dusting with sulphur. Because of the ease of application many prefer dusting to spraying. The same grade of sulphur should be used as described above and should be applied, in light doses, at least once each week. When the mildew has disappeared, the applications can then be reduced. If one prefers to spray rather than dust, it is suggested that so-called "wettable" sulphurs be used. These can also be obtained at local stores and directions for use are printed on the containers.

Since the fungus lives over during the winter, to some extent, at least on fallen infected leaves, all plant debris should be carefully raked up and burned in the fall or as early as possible in the spring. Avoidance of shady places and wider spacing of the plants or bushes, to promote free circulation of air, will aid in preventing further trouble with this disease also. The above suggestions will also control certain other rose diseases, such as, blackspot, brown canker and rust.

POLITICS at Random

By BYRON PRICE
(Chief Of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington.)

IT NOW seems assured that President Roosevelt will have his own way entirely with the special session of congress, right up to the last whack of the gavel.

A month ago signs pointed in the other direction. In both senate and house there was growing restlessness, particularly among the new members, who once or twice appeared almost out of hand. The democratic leadership was much worried.

Toward the end of April the Presidential fortunes turned. Mr. Roosevelt's word again was law. It developed that he was destined not only to shape by his leadership every single action of the session, but even to set the date of its adjournment.

The change represented a remarkable recovery of prestige for the President. It lifted him into a position of legislative power regarded by many as even greater than that he enjoyed during the first few days of his administration, when he put the emergency bank bill through under whip and spur.

This did not come about by accident. A great deal of practical planning and careful, patient execution lay behind it.

At The Pie Counter

In the matter of patronage, for instance, it came to be pretty well understood—without the administration actually saying so—that those who stood in the way of the White House program might expect nothing from the pie counter.

Then a report got around—somehow—that the President was prepared to do as he often had done as governor of New York and appeal to the people directly over the heads of congressmen.

After the malcontents had thought these two things over for a while they felt differently. Most of them began looking for a good opportunity to get aboard the band wagon again.

The Beams Test

The degree to which the Roosevelt leadership was restored can be measured by the one example of the beams. Few doubted that large majorities in both senate and house wanted the beams, but the movement for its enactment was ended with great suddenness by a hint from the White House, spoken privately and without public commitment.

Mr. Roosevelt thus has passed through the first test of his leadership. His trial by fire now is transferred to the field of foreign affairs, upon which he is entering with such high expectations.

Lights of NEW YORK

By WALTER THEIMER

A subway express banged past a man in dirty overalls with a red and white lantern in his hand. He was standing beneath a ventilator and a shaft of sunlight revealed his pallid features. He was a trackwalker—one of the hundreds who spend their working hours tramping along the long, dark tubes alert for loose bolts, broken rails or anything else that might cause disaster or delay. Here and there they flash their white lights, the red showing toward the rear, being a warning to approaching trains. On them is heavy responsibility. Over the steel which they inspect, millions ride each day.

There are thousands of underground toilers in New York. The subways account for an army. Dispatchers' offices are little boxes down beneath the street level. Hundreds of station agents work in small platform booths. At the larger stations, there are guards who assist in loading and unloading freight. They are the ones who, when a car seems full to bursting, pack in a few more sardines. Porters get more sunlight than others as they sweep the stairways—usually when the stairways are greatly crowded and sweeping is extra difficult.

Subway track repair men make repairs in bright light. It is artificial illumination, however, of such intensity that they actually toil in the spotlight. Between trains, they are in furious activity. They don't have to be on the alert for danger. A lookout equipped with a red flag, red light and a whistle keeps watch for them. At the approach of a train, he shrills the whistle and the workers hop. Though they move quickly, they have due regard for the deadly third rail, of course.

Train crews in the subway seldom see daylight, except for brief flashes, except when they are off duty. Motormen, before they are accepted, must undergo strict physical examinations. Then they are put through a long course of training before they are allowed to handle the controller. Yet in the operation of subway trains, the human factor has been eliminated to a great extent. On the controller handle is what is known as "the dead man's button." Should the motorman relax pressure on that button, the train stops. And maintenance men have to be called to get it in motion again.

It is impossible for a motorman to run past a station. If he fails to shut off power and apply the brakes, a trip does it for him. Nor can he pass a red signal, that carrying with it an automatic stop also. A train can be "keyed" past a signal but that practice is in disfavor because of the danger attached. A motorman can pass a danger signal, or "red ball," as it is called, by getting out of his compartment and throwing a lever. But he must have an excellent reason and know that the rules of safety are not being violated. Considering the number of persons carried daily, the safety average is extremely high.

Many other New York workers see little of the city in the daylight. There are those who are employed in conduits and tunnels. Or they go down in manholes and do not come up until quitting time. Railroad men work underground in and about terminals. There are underground business centers also and the underground galleries of Grand Central have a number of men who call them home. There are others also who do not see daylight while they are working though they are not underground. They are under water—the toilers in the caissons beneath the surface of the rivers.

Operates on Mother to Save Her Life

Sudbury, Ont.—Mrs. Mike Smeeglo, thirty years old, owes her life to the courage and resourcefulness of her twelve-year-old son Steve.

Without funds to obtain medical attention, Steve performed an emergency operation on his mother, who was suffering from pleurisy.

For two days the boy had petitioned doctors in Sudbury to visit his mother, who lives in a small cottage six miles north of Sudbury. He failed in his efforts, however, because he lacked the necessary $10 fee.

When his last effort failed he took a razor, made an incision in his mother's back and drained out more than a quart of fluid.

Provincial police visited Mrs. Smeeglo and found her doing well. They said that there was no doubt but that she owed her life to her son.

When Slavery Days Existed in Ulster Co.

West Shokan, May 11.—Among the personal belongings left by the late "Uncle Jake" Crispell of Shokan is his grandfather's hand wrought wood chest, with its unique secret till. Among heirlooms of the Crispell family there are to be found several chests each being of the same type of craftsmanship. Within the sanctum-sanctorum of this secret till were found several old documents, such as deeds, wills, births, deaths, etc., but not in the least unknown to "Uncle Jake", and of which he occasionally made mention. The most interesting, perhaps, of these papers is a bill of sale or transfer of ownership of a slave, a black man called "Jack", to his grandfather, Thomas Crispell, the date of which is March 24, 1795. This still legible and intelligible age browned document is well written in the style and wording of that day, and reads as follows:

Know all men by these presents that I John Crispell of Marbletown in the County of Ulster and province of New York for and in consideration of the sum of thirty pounds to me in hand paid by Thomas Crispell of Marbletown in said County, Whereof, I do hereby acknowledge the receipt and myself therewith fully and entirely satisfied have bargained, sold, set over and delivered and by these presents in plain and open market according to the just and due form of law in that case made and provided do bargain set over and deliver, into the said Thomas Crispell, a Negro man named Jack; to have and to hold the said bargained slave unto the said Thomas Crispell his executors, administrators and assigns to the only proper use and behoof of him the said Thomas Crispell his executors, administrators and assigns, for ever and I the said John Crispell for my self, my executors and administrators the said bargained slave unto the said Thomas Crispell, his executors, administrators and assigns against all and all manner of persons will warrant and defend by these presents:

In witness whereof together with the delivery of the bargained slave, I have hereunto set my hand and seal this twenty-seventh day of March in the Year of Our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety-five. Signed, sealed and delivered in the presence of John Nottingham, Peter Jansen.

JAN CHRISPEL.
Seal.

Thomas Crispell was a brother of John and Hendrick and Solomon Crispell. They were sons of Jan or John Crispell, who migrated over into the Esopus valley from the Dutch settlement at Hurley on or about the year 1739. He with John Nottingham was among the first permanent settlers in the territory bordering the Esopus creek now covered by the waters of the Ashokan. "Jan Crispell" is the old manner of spelling the name, located a short distance south of the village of Shokan on what in later years at the time of New York city's taking the reservoir property was known as the Cole farm. His son, Hendrick, located west of the Esopus creek on the fertile flats in 1760. He later built a stone house which remained until the water works days. His property together with that owned by his brother, John, covered much of the territory about the confines of West Shokan. John located north of the old village, known in after years as the Almira DeLong farm. Solomon lived at Shokan and died at the age of a century in 1865.

Thomas Crispell served in the Revolutionary War. He was a prisoner of the British army from the battle of Long Island in 1776 until after the close of the war, when he was transferred and placed on guard duty at the naval base in Halifax, Nova Scotia. This agreement he signed with his captors in order to gain release from the notorious old Sugar House prison in New York city, on condition that he should not take part in combat against his countrymen. On march 6, 1787, the Patriot Continental and later redcoat Britisher married Mary Coons, who was born June 7, 1763, and died May 22, 1846. The couple began their married life that year upon the farm which came down through his first son, Abram, who was born in 1787 and died in 1882, to Jacob, his second oldest son of Abram, born December 14, 1842, and here upon the old homestead Uncle Jake spent 67 of his 90 years. The first home was built of logs but when more prosperous days came the frame farmhouse, with its massive stone chimney and open fireplace at the east end, was built in the year 1809 and stood until torn down in 1923.

Thomas and Mary Crispell, according to a record preserved in the former's handwriting, had five children, as follows: Mary, first child, born November 16, 1787; Sarah, second child, born September 14, 1794; Abram, their first son, born March 13, 1797. Their fourth child, Rebekah, was born August 29, 1799. Their fifth child, Mary, was born August 13, 1803.

Doubtless the need for more land to be cleared grew in order to provide the raising of food and flax for an increasing family and this had to do with the father bargaining for an able bodied slave to assist him in the laborious work of those days. It seems clear that the purchase in 1795 was made from his father, Jan or John, at Shokan, as until 1823 this section of the town of Olive lay within the extensive territory of Marbletown, so mentioned in the bill of sale.

As Abram, the son, developed into his teens, and being the only son, he grew resentful of the lordly manner of "Jackie," the negro slave, who perhaps felt it his duty to order the boy what and how to do about the farm work. Finally as the friction continued to develop between Abram and Jackie, the former, who had by now came to the husky age of 16 or thereabout (this as related by Uncle Jake) delivered an ultimatum to his father along these lines: That either Jackie should be given his freedom and there dropped from the family, or else he (Abram) should leave home. The grievance came to be settled by drawing up the proper papers and "Jackie" became a free man. It is unfortunate that this document has not, too, been preserved to posterity.

Before his release from bondage, Jack had been married to a woman younger than himself named Rhoda, and they assumed the family name of Crispell, as was a custom of the times of those days.

In order to give the pair a start in their newly found freedom, Thomas Crispell, the former master, provided a strip of land, now included in the lower farm fields owned by Charles Henley. He assisted with the erection of a log house having a stone chimney. The remains of the cellar foundations and toppled chimney are yet plainly in existence. Jacky also set out an apple orchard in a clearing made along the stream which still bears his name as the "Jacky Brook". A few of these old gnarled trees yet remained not many years ago, and were known as the "Jacky Orchard". Along with tending to his little clearing and raising their family, Jacky maintained the good graces of the Crispell family and at times assisted with work on the farm. He also came to gain local fame as a boot-maker, and during the early years of the tanning and lumbering industry in Watson Hollow also at Samsonville, his services were much in demand in this line, as might be verified by the paths which his customers came to make through the woods and over clearings to his humble door.

In those days all of the farmers kept sheep, especially for their wool as all clothing was made from homespun flax or wool. A story has been handed down that Jacky made a bet with Massa Crispell that he could steal a sheep from his flock without him being the wiser, and Mr. Crispell had told Jacky that the sheep would be his if he could do it. Doubtless the Crispell flock was acquainted well with Jacky and did not fear him. At any rate one dark rainy morning Jacky called to his former master from without his chamber window, as it was probably not unusual for Jacky to be about at dawn for a day's work. "Massy de weather's black and heavy dis mawnin'." "Massa Crispell" returned the greeting but did not forsake his comfortable bed. He did not realize that Jacky was carrying a fat black sheep on his shoulders and with broad smile on his face was on his way home. The joke was a good one on old massa and true to his word, Jacky got the sheep.

"Holiday" Chosen by New Paltz Actors

Philip Barry's long-run, successful "Holiday" which featured Hope Williams on the stage and Ann Harding on the screen, will be presented by the Dramatic Club of the New Paltz Normal School.

The annual production of the Dramatic Club, under the able guidance of A. B. Bennett, is a highly superior piece of artistry. "Holiday", after having been carefully rehearsed, will present attractive scenery and sparkling conversation on Wednesday, May 17, at 8:20 p. m., in the New Paltz Normal auditorium.

In charge of the play, and under Mr. Bennett's guidance, are Vera Rushforth, stage manager; Catherine Donnelly, publicity manager; and Florence Egbertson, property manager. In the leading roles will appear Ruth Klein, Phyllis Falk, Irving Binder, and Stanley Hoffman.

The annual production of the Dramatic Club is one of the outstanding events of the Normal School year; it is especially so this year in that the presentation is Philip Barry's brilliant "Holiday".

Light That Travels Far

Light travels from the moon to the earth in less than two seconds, but light from the most distant known objects in the universe requires more than 100,000,000 years to reach the earth.

Owner of Kingston Shows at Meeting

According to this month's issue of the Film Curb, New York Theatre Owners were organized April 25th at Hotel Astor, New York city, with Harry Brandt in the chair. About 125 theatres were represented and they agreed to employ only members of the Empire State Operator's Union. Jack Springer, Sam Cecalls, Walter Reade and A. H. Schwartz, independent executives and owners of large independent chains of theatres, were among those present and active. The new organization is not affiliated with either the New York city Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, the Charles O'Reilly group, nor to either the National Allied or the M. P. T. O. A.

Walter Reade, pioneer operator of theatres in the metropolitan area, is very successfully operating the Mayfair Theatre in New York city in connection with his many other theatres in New Jersey and New York. RKO's operation of the Mayfair ceased last month. Reade's Kingston and Broadway Theatres are part of this extensive chain of theatres.

AUSTRALIA SPLITTING OVER SECESSION ISSUE.

Canberra, Australia (AP).—Secession from the Australian federation is becoming a major issue in Australia.

The referendum on secession in Western Australia has now led to a similar demand in South Australia—another primary producing state—where farmers' organizations are urging the state to quit the commonwealth.

There is a similar, though smaller, movement in the island state of Tasmania.

The wealthier and more populous states of New South Wales, Victoria and Queensland, which find a splendid market for their manufactured products in the rural states, are strongly against any breakaway from federation.

East Indies Rubber Trees Idle.

Batavia, Dutch East Indies (AP).—Nearly a fifth of the rubber acreage in the Dutch East Indies was out of tap at the last count. The figures showed 155,000 acres idle, being 18.5 per cent of the tappable area.

IL DUCE BALKS AT HITLER IDEA OF "ANSCHLUSS"

By ANDRUE BERDING

Rome (AP).—Where the fascism of Mussolini and the nazism of Hitler meet and where they sever has been demonstrated by recent events here.

Most of the points were cleared during the visits of Engelbert Dollfuss, chancellor of Austria; Franz von Papen, vice-chancellor of Germany, and Herman Goering, right hand man of Hitler.

Disagree On 'Anschluss'

The conversations of these men with Benito Mussolini showed that the programs for Italy's black shirts and Germany's brown shirts conform in their concentrated nationalism, their desire to curb an overpowerful France and their wish to see the treaty of Versailles and other peace pacts revised.

But they break absolutely on "anschluss," or union of Austria with Germany.

Mussolini's Objections

He had received Mussolini's assurance that Italy would firmly oppose any "anschluss."

Dollfuss is against "anschluss" now that Hitler is in power, because he fears Austria would suffer the same fate as German states like Bavaria and be reduced to the rank of provinces.

There are three reasons why Mussolini does not countenance "anschluss." They are:

Union of Austria and Germany would bring a powerful nation to Italy's northeast frontier. She already has France on her northwest frontier.

Il Duce Looks To Balkans

German influence would penetrate into the Balkans. Mussolini, with his phrase, "Italy's future lies to the east," considers the Balkans his own sphere of influence.

The Italian war-won province of Alto Adige, formerly the Austrian Tyrol, might wish to revert to German-Austria. The majority of inhabitants of this province are of Teutonic origin and speak German.

It became evident that Il Duce and the Germans were in excellent agreement on such subjects as Mussolini's peace plan, German parity in armament, revision of the peace treaties to benefit Germany, Austria, Hungary and Bulgaria, and most of the German internal development, with the exception of the anti-Jewish movement.

Dollfuss Hails Friendship

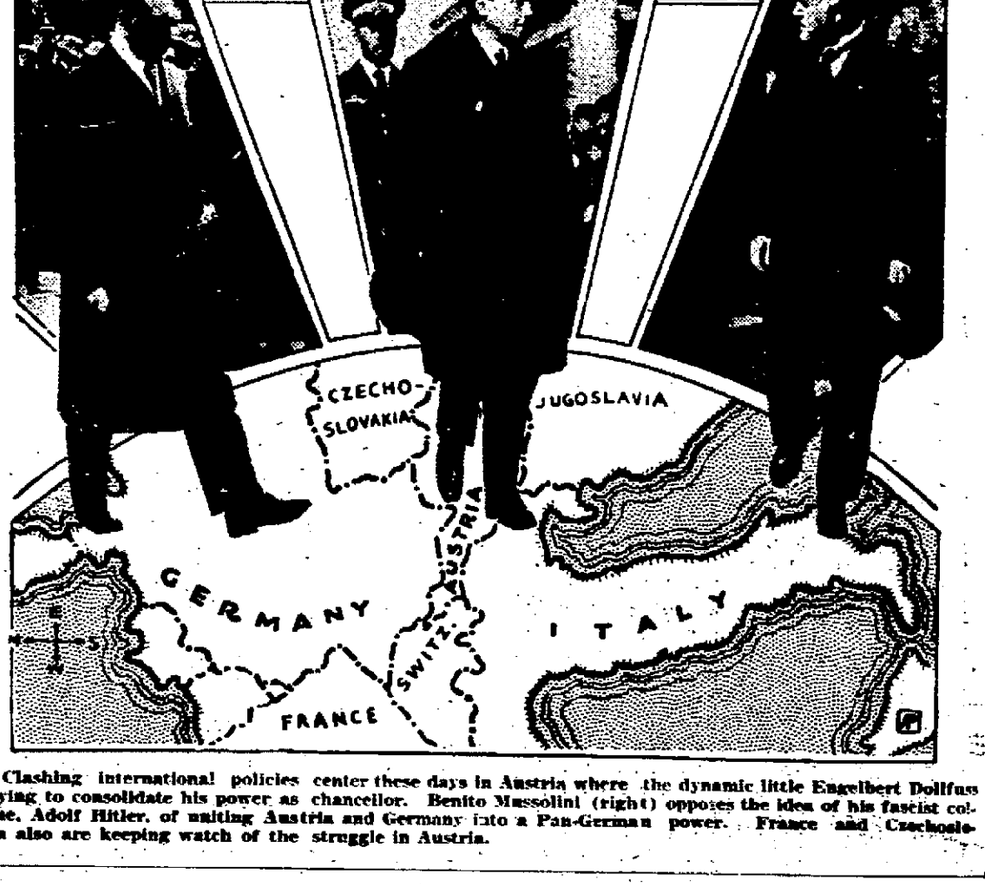
But the Germans did not leave as happily as the Austrian. Dollfuss told two Austrian newspapermen before he quitted Rome:

"Austria has a true friend to the south of her."

When he returned to Vienna he said that "the treaty of friendship concluded with Italy at the beginning of 1930 by Chancellor Schober is not merely a formal paper. Austria finds in Italy a real understanding."

Fascist Ranks Split By Austro-German Union Idea

Dictators Take Sides: Neighbors Watch



Clashing international policies center these days in Austria where the dynamic little Engelbert Dollfuss is trying to consolidate his power as chancellor. Benito Mussolini (right) opposes the idea of his fascist colleague, Adolf Hitler, of uniting Austria and Germany into a Pan-German power. France and Czechoslovakia also are keeping watch of the struggle in Austria.

FOUR NATIONS EYE AUSTRIA'S POLITICAL FIGHT

By WADE WERNER

Vienna (AP).—Whatever the outcome of the involved political struggle in Austria, one thing is certain: the victory will be credited to a foreign power.

France, Germany and Italy are keenly interested in what is happening here. Czechslovakia is watching, too, not only as an ally of France and a member of the Little Entente, but as a republic bordering on Austria.

What makes these countries so interested in Austria's affairs is the fact that the next few weeks may determine whether the republic will become part of Hitlerite Germany, or a fascist ally of Germany, Italy and Hungary, or a neutral republic friendly to anti-revisionist France and her allies.

Hitlerites Gain Strength

If the Hitlerites win out—and many people think that development inevitable—the formation of a nazi government in Vienna will be looked upon in France and other countries as a practical realization of "anschluss," or union with Germany.

"Anschluss," it will be recalled, was vetoed by the allies when Austria and Germany voted to unite just after the collapse of the Austro-Hungarian empire. A prohibition of such unification was written into article 88 of the treaty of St. Germain.

The nazi leader here, Alfred E. Frauenfeld, says that a nazi government in Austria would not mean immediate "anschluss," because it is "a question of foreign policy and would have to be treated as such."

Duce Opposes Union

Italy, France and the Little Entente all oppose "anschluss." Friendly as Mussolini may be toward the Hitler regime in Germany, he does not view with enthusiasm a powerful Germany extending down to the Brenner pass.

On the other hand, if the Dollfuss government or a subsequent heimwehr government should succeed in crushing the socialists and at the same time warding off the nazi drive, the resultant militantly conservative regime could still be a vital unit in a determined revisionist bloc including Germany, Austria, Hungary and Italy.

That solution might please Italy, but it would not satisfy France and her allies.

No Neutrality Possible

If, on the other hand, financial difficulties (or, as some political leaders put it, "French financial pressure") should force the government to grant the socialist demand for a return to parliamentary rule and a resolute abstinence from revisionist alliances, the resultant "neutral" Austria would not be looked upon as such by Italy or Germany.

And so, whichever path the puzzled Austrians choose, their choice will be discussed in other countries as a "French victory," or "an Italian success" or "a German set-back" with very little breath or printer's ink wasted on whether it was a fine solution for Austria.

MILK SPREE NO EXCUSE FOR DECRYING PORTUGAL

Lisbon, (AP).—An excuse that he was "inflamed by milk" was given by Jorge Teixeira when charged in court with rushing up to a policeman and shouting:

"Long live the republic! Down with the idiotic dictatorship which has been doing nothing for seven years."

He told the court he had been drinking heavily in a dairy but a fine of $50 and loss of civil rights for two years was imposed.

A French statesman suggests cutting France's war debt to us 50 per cent. Sah! Don 'tell him we haven't hoped to get that much.

Kingston: "Rasputin and the Empress." Any one of the Barrymore's is sure to signify an unusual and brilliant picture, but when all three of them, Lionel, Ethel and John, are cast in the same play, something approaching picture perfection is the outcome. Such is this arresting picture of Russia just before the revolution, a decadent nation in the hands of trembling rulers who look to a mad monk for guidance. Ethel Barrymore in the role of the worried Imperial mother is superb in her talkie debut, while John Barrymore is perfect as the royal and regal Prince Chegodieff. Lionel Barrymore as Rasputin, the mad monk, offers one of the greatest of the year's screen characterizations. Others in a giant cast include Ralph Morgan, Diana Wynward, and Tad Alexander. Lavish, moving and generally historically authentic, this massive story of the Russia of yesterday is something to place on the four star entertainment list.

Orpheum: "No Man of Her Own" and "Fargo Express". Clark Gable and Carole Lombard are co-starred in the first attraction, a fastly paced and romantic story of a gambler, and a girl who teaches him to go straight. "Fargo Express" ushers in Ken Maynard in another of those western characterizations of love and valor under tremendous odds. Tarzan, the Wonder Horse, is effective in a featured role.

Broadway: "Girl Missing". Ben Lyon, Glenda Farrell, Mary Brian, Lyle Talbot, and Guy Kibbee are all featured players in this mystery story of a bride who disappears on her wedding night. Before the show is over, there's a murder, a kidnaping, and many other exciting features all rolled into one.

Tomorrow.

Kingston: "Bedtime Story." Baby LeRoy in his first screen debut, smiles and chuckles his way through Maurice Chevalier's new feature picture, and before the final flicker, Mr. Chevalier, the star, has his latest talking picture snatched away from him by an infant many years his junior. In other words a new star is born, who despite his unimpressive age, proves a more capable and engaging actor than many of Hollywood's leading lights. The story is the tale of a bachelor, who finds a baby in his automobile, and who takes it home and runs into numerous complications by doing so. There are some of the sparkling Chevalier song renditions, some rare comedy with Edward Everett Horton, and Helen Twelvetrees lends her charm and beauty to the romatic side of the story. But the work of Baby LeRoy is something not to miss. Recommended to Chevalier fans wholeheartedly, and to anybody who enjoys his movie entertainment in a light and optimistic vein.

Orpheum. Same.

Broadway: "Hell's Highway." Richard Dix in his most powerful portrayal since "Cimarron." This time, as a member of a chain gang, his acting rises to new heights, although the story is morbib and brutal in the telling. It's another expose of prison chain gang methods, sparing no effort to show the inhumanity and brutality of this form of penal servitude.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS and SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—In a Hollywood studio these days they seem to take no chances on being without glamour even for a minute.

Marlene Dietrich had not packed her bags for that trip to Germany when Dorothea Wieck arrived—and the scene at once became tense with the excitement that always pervades a studio when a new star comes.

Rose, Not Orchid

Not the conventionally languorous foreign beauty is Dorothea, whose personality suggests wholesome fresh air in contrast to the hot-house atmosphere surrounding the traditional movie exotic. In floral terms she is healthy wild rose, not pampered orchid.

The day I met her she was trim in white sports clothes, with long brown bob tucked behind her ears under a white beret, and she wore a scarf of red, white and blue. Her school-girl freshness is accentuated by a pink and white complexion and sparkling blue eyes, bright with animation and interest. She has a hearty handshake, a ready laugh and a readier smile.

She is not self-conscious about her English, which she is mastering rapidly and with slight accent. Each day she needs to grope for fewer words.

"My teacher and I have speak—spoken—for two hours and a half today," she said. "You will excuse me please if I am excited and tired?"

The new language is her principal enthusiasm at the moment, but she has many. There is music—"Bach! Beethoven!" Her eyes danced.

"Soon I hear your boy violinist, Yehudi Menuhin. When he was in Germany I have to work, but here I go hear him." And books . . . her husband, a baron in Germany, has just written one. And museums . . . "I love them. You have museums here?" Dogs, the theater, and sports are others.

Ambition

And there is "Madame Bovary." She wants to create that Flaubert heroine for the screen.

"In Germany once I have written a script of it," she laughed. "I would show it to no one now, for I have a new picture of her in my mind. But I hope I can play her here."

She likes serious roles. She will make first "Hangman's Whip," then "Cradle Song," and then perhaps "Madame Bovary."

"Maedchen in Uniform" gave her a test of emotional roles.

HUGE TOBACCO BONUS BOOMS AUSTRALIAN CROP

Canberra, (AP).—A price of 27 pence a pound, 400 per cent above the world average, has been guaranteed Australian tobacco growers by the federal government.

The step was taken despite rapid increase in production and in returns to planters.

Official figures show that last year, in the single season, the output jumped from 2,000,000 to 10,000,000 pounds, the crop selling for well over $5,000,000.

Nothing new about "managed" currency. Only it's been badly managed.

Parent-Teacher Associations

P.-T. A. No. 4.

At the May meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of School No. 4, held on Tuesday, Mrs. G. D. Matthews presented the following slate, which was unanimously elected: President, Mrs. Jesse Dunham; vice-president, Mrs. Joseph McConnell; secretary, Mrs. W. R. Anderson; treasurer, Mrs. Oscar Goodsell.

An announcement of the Spring Conference of Central Hudson District to be held at Poughkeepsie on Saturday, June 3, was read and it was voted to send the new president and vice-president as delegates.

An appeal was made by Principal Van Valkenburgh for March records for the school Victrola.

A program was rendered consisting of a piano solo, "In the Gondola," by Kreutzler, played by Banilda Simoneine; a military dance, also a Dutch dance executed by Miriam Tammany and Cornelia Roe, and a vocal solo, "That Old Fashioned Sweetheart of Mine," sung by Roselyn Krepple. The accompanists were Mrs. G. D. Matthews and Katherine Mc Connell. Principal Van Valkenburgh gave greetings, this being "Parents' Night," and he being the only member of the faculty who is both a parent and a teacher. He also presented the speaker, Superintendent Van Ingen, who gave an interesting and informing talk upon school matters. Superintendent Van Ingen told of the dean of a prominent university who wrote letter to the fathers of 150 students in relating to the school work. Only 20 per cent of the fathers responded, about 40 per cent of the mothers replied to the letters, the remainder paid no attention to the communication. An artist Mr. Van Ingen quoted as replying when asked what he would like his son to become, that he would like him to grow up to be a good man, and he believed all wanted their children to become good citizens. Mr. Van Ingen named as primary factors in life the home, school, church and one's friends and associates. He feels that in spite of the fact that the home has turned over to the factory largely the making of clothing, etc., to the school the education of their children, to the church, Y. M. C. A., Scouts, their moral and religious training and to the theatre, clubs and dance halls their recreation, the home still plays an important part in the child's life, and most difficulties found with the children in school can be traced to something in the home. There is no depression in the schools in regard to the number of children attending, the difficulty has been and is in financing, housing and providing extra courses for the great number of students.

Mr. Van Ingen thinks perhaps the biggest problem the country and the entire world has at present is the wise use of the leisure which this machine age is giving to so many people.

A rising vote of thanks was given to Mr. Van Ingen for his much enjoyed discourse.

Ice cream and cake were served.

MORGAN'S :: THE BANK ON THE CORNER

No. 2—Gauging The Giant's Strength

EDITOR'S NOTE: How strong is the House of Morgan? How widespread its influence? This is the second of three articles dealing with these and related questions.

By J. R. MRACKETT
(Copyright, 1933, By The Associated Press)

New York, May 12.—The power of the House of Morgan. . . . There are no statistics available to the public to show the deposits of J. P. Morgan and Co., no figures to show the amount of its loans, none on the private means of Morgan or his partners.

To Wall Street the stranger point is that no one has even estimated these facts, publicly, at least, and in Wall Street nearly always somebody, some place will estimate almost anything for you.

One little known fact is that Morgan's voluntarily files a statement with the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. It does not have to file such a statement by law, nor is the bank subject to examination by the legal authorities.

Thus, despite the fact that statistics on Morgan's are not available to the public, they are in the hands of the constituted authorities—meaning that the authorities know the power (from the statistical viewpoint, at least) of Morgan's.

Influence Reputed Tremendous.

It is taken for granted that the influence of the house is tremendous. Those close to the firm will say it probably always has been exaggerated. At any rate, this is a prime reason why Morgan and his partners are to testify before the congressional investigation of private banking.

The investigators have a theory that power as great as Morgan's is reputed to possess is so bound up with public interest that the public should know in some detail what the power is.

Winthrop Aldrich, president of the Chase National Bank, largest commercial bank in the world, has urged that private banks be required to publish statements if they accept deposits. The commercial bank argument is that since private banks are in banking competition they should be subject to similar regulation.

Some Oppose Investigation.

Opponents of the investigations hold that private banking is just that—private. A person or corporation that deposits money with a private bank does so with the full realization that the bank is subject to no official regulation and that its operations are not public.

Such depositors are persons or institutions of means, generally, for the minimum set for deposits in the case of Morgan's and of all private banks under the New York state law is $7,500. The depositors are secured entirely by the character of the banker and by his repute for handling his business prudently, and they know it.

Nations Among Depositors.

Morgan's customers range from great nations to business corporations, large or small, and wealthy individuals. Most of the depositors realize that Morgan's, while not officially limited as to the type of its resources, follows much the same rules as to liquidity as commercial banks follow.

But, generally speaking, the depositors accepted the name of the house as sufficient surety. Some of them may recall the testimony of the late H. P. Davison, Morgan partner, before the Pujo committee in 1913 when he made plain that the house seeks always to keep its affairs in shape to pay off its obligations on demand.

For such underwriting as it enters the Morgan firm declares that it utilizes its own capital, as in the case of the United States Steel Corporation, organized 30 years ago by the late founder of the present house. United Corporation, a great holding company for the minority interests in certain public utilities, was organized with the cooperation of the present head of the house.

Never Has Majority Control.

Morgan's has organized other business units and today is credited with holding large interests, but never majority control, in them. No one not in the partnership knows, of course—or will say publicly—the extent of those interests. Advocates of private banking hold this is just as much the private business of a private bank as it might be of a private individual.

J. P. Morgan (left) directs the establishment founded by his father, the late J. P. Morgan (center), in association with a list of partners that includes Junius S. Morgan (right), son of the present head of the House of Morgan. The sketch shows how the stone Morgan building nestles among the giants of New York's financial canyons with the stock exchange and sub-treasury its neighbors.

The most publicity that comes to Morgan's is in connection with bond issues. Morgan's sells bonds for nations and for corporations. The firm generally heads a syndicate of other banks for the sale of these securities, and investors often regard the fact that Morgan's is floating the issue as sufficient indication of its worth.

No Default In 15 Years.

Neither Morgan's nor other issuing banks or houses guarantee the bonds they sell. As for Morgan's, according to those close to the firm, no foreign bond issue issued for the last 15 years under its sponsorship has ever been or is now in default.

Bond flotations generally are fairly profitable. Thomas Lamont's testimony in December, 1931, before the Senate finance committee gave intimate details of both wholesale and retail profits in bond issues. Morgan's, incidentally, never undertakes the public issue of a common stock.

Rating Its Power.

Many have tried to analyze Morgan's power, but have run up against the stone wall of no statistics. By conjecture or deduction observers have reached conclusions showing great power in degrees ranging from "absolute dictatorship of American finance and industry" to the relatively simple statement of influence in a large domain—wielded, first, by Morgan, the founder of the house, now by his son and in the future, perhaps, by his grandson, Junius S. Morgan.

What statistics as to interlocking directorates are available may or may not disclose the influence of the house. In absolute financial resources it undoubtedly ranks far below some of the big commercial banks; in less tangible influences, resulting in part, at least, from the house's history and prestige, it may rank higher. The coming investigation is expected to help settle the argument.

Whether Morgan's business is anybody else's business is a major moot point. Just as Morgan insists on character as well as collateral in his dealings with others, so do these others accept the character of the House of Morgan.

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON — Perhaps none of President Roosevelt's selections for high office in his administration created greater interest among Washington political observers than that of George Peek to direct the new farm relief plan.

GEORGE N. PEEK

It was not the fact that Peek was a republican until he broke with that party in 1928 to support Alfred E. Smith. Nor was he an unknown. His activities in behalf of the farmer have made him a familiar figure for a long time in national legislative circles.

Peek's selection is interesting because he has the reputation of being a realistic and practical sort of an individual in his views on the subject of farm relief. The fact that he was a manufacturer of farm machinery would seem to indicate that.

And to have a man with Peek's reputation administering this particular bill, in the light of what some of the so-called best minds in the senate and house said about it while it was in the course of construction is interesting.

A Matter Of Balance

The gentlemen on capitol hill were fond of referring to the farm bill, while it was under consideration in congress, as being largely a professorial concoction. One heard it referred to, for example, as the "Tugwell-Ezekiel formula"—Tugwell being the professor from Columbia university brought in by President Roosevelt and made assistant secretary of agriculture, and Ezekiel being Dr. Mordecai Ezekiel, an agricultural economist of that department.

The politically-minded in the capital have been endeavoring for a long time to figure out just where the "brain trust" fits into the "new deal." Some have been openly distrustful of the professors, looking upon them as political theorists whose ideas simply won't work out in practice.

Now they are asking if Roosevelt's selection of Peek as farm relief administrator doesn't answer the question.

When Views Diverge

Doesn't it mean, they ask, that while the President leans heavily on his "brain trust" for planning, he prefers the man of wide practical experience for the actual task of executing the plan?

It is no secret that Peek and the professors have carried on a friendly dispute as to how the provisions of the farm bill should be applied. They have met with the President and he has told them to get together and compose their differences.

Those who know Peek say that he will not yield; that he'll refuse the post rather than surrender his convictions. If he is on the job when the work actually starts, they say, it will be a signal that his views have prevailed.

Directional Indicators Required

All motor vehicles operated on the streets of Bucharest, Rumania, must be equipped with directional indicators as the result of a municipal order.

High Above the Sea

Innsbruck in Austria shares honors with Madrid in being the city situated at the highest elevation in Europe. It lies 1,913 feet above sea level.

FASHIONS By ELEANOR GUNN

Pleasant Dreams of Silk and Lace

Copyright, 1933, by Fairchild

The decolletage cut to the waist in back, squared off and much elaborated with lace banding, is a feature of the tea rose French crepe gown at the left above, which has its alencon tinted to match the fabric. The cross strapping of the lace is interesting and the gown buttons under the arm to hold it trimly in place.

Square in the front is the other gown, with its loose swinging swagger type of jacket. The diagonal under-the-bust insertion of the embroidery and lace, tiny French knots and hem stitching, accents the molded line. This also is in French crepe and the lace is Binche for a change from the more staple selections.

Fashions With Froth and Foamy Effects

New York—The dance or dinner frock with its own little wrap is no stranger to us. Capes are newer, but in the opinion of many not to be mentioned in the same breath with jackets, yet they are well worth considering. Please note that this rippling cape is also ruffled. The unexpected appearance of ruffling is one of the interests of the season. Many things are now ruffled that were never ruffled before.

The formal fabric used informally is one of the season's whims. It is just as consistent as our habit of using informal materials formally, pique being the outstanding example.

For summer evenings just ahead one has a wide choice of costume. It is no wonder that women refuse to make an issue, just choose what best pleases them.

If you like prints—wear them. If you like lace, wear it. There are string laces that everybody likes and all manner of laces, cotton and otherwise, dyed every conceivable color, with a special preference apparently for blue. There are scores of attractive embroidered materials for summer among which may be mentioned cottons embroidered in gold.

You can hardly fail to have missed the fact that field flowers are covering some of the very smartest frocks in town, and that clusters of field flowers are being worn almost under the chin, the new high for the corsage bouquet. If your bodice is high enough, wear your flowers centering it, as high as possible. You may wear them elsewhere, but this is the newest spot to be decorated.

Yes, you must wear gloves for evening, and for every other time for that matter, and don't forget the gloves made of the material of your frock.

DID YOU KNOW THAT

"The Merry Widow" sailor comes forward as a summer fashion, its wide brim being particularly suited for summer, the coupling of this wide stiff brim and the flat crown makes it the very personification of the flat silhouette in millinery.

FOR THE COUNTRY CLUB DANCE

Copyright, 1933, by Fairchild

This costume is fashioned of black, white and red chiffon, the designs arranged to give a plaided effect. The cape is bordered with a ruffle of chartreuse chiffon, with the same medium used for the fringed petals. A large flower is posed at the waistline.

Talks to parents

Stolen Sweets

By ALICE JUDSON PEALE

Stolen fruits do not taste doubly good to all children. The child with an active conscience often has a bad time over them.

A little girl who confessed stealing money from her mother's purse whenever she was especially angry with her, was in the habit of buying with it candy that she did not like and that she then proceeded to give away to other children.

On one occasion when she bought something that she really wanted, an ice cream cone, she dropped it on the pavement after the first bite. Returning to the store she bought another only to drop this one, too, as soon as she got out on the street.

These acts, that is, the buying of candy which she did not like and the dropping of the ice cream before she had a chance to enjoy it, can not be satisfactorily explained as pure accident. Psychologically they must be understood as the workings of the child's guilty conscience which would not permit her to enjoy herself when she had done something she knew to be wrong.

Children of the sort who thus punish themselves, are not helped by being punished again by mother or father when they are caught. The stealing is not an act of callousness to right and wrong, it is something the child cannot help doing because of some emotional dilemma in which it finds itself.

Children who steal with pleasure in the theft need understanding rather than discipline. Where the mother cannot herself discover what is troubling the child, whether it is lack of sufficient normal pleasures, jealousy of a brother or sister, nagging or unjust severity at home, she should take her child to a mental hygienist for help in the solution of her problem.

NEGLECT OF COMMON CONSTIPATION IS A SERIOUS MATTER

Prevent This Condition With Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

The first question your doctor asks is whether you are constipated or not. He knows that this condition may cause headaches, loss of appetite and energy, sleeplessness. It is often the starting point of serious disease.

You can prevent and relieve common constipation so easily. Just eat a delicious cereal once a day. Laboratory tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to further aid regular habits. ALL-BRAN is also a rich source of blood-building iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that found in leafy vegetables. Within the body, it forms a soft mass. Gently, it clears out the intestinal wastes.

Isn't this "cereal way" safer and far more pleasant than taking patent medicines—so often harmful? Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily are usually sufficient. With each meal in serious cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Enjoy ALL-BRAN as a cereal, or use in cooking. Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Dance Successful.

The dance, which was held at Olive Bridge on Wednesday evening, May 10, was largely attended by people from Olive Bridge, Shokan, West Shokan, Kingston and from many other nearby towns and villages. Balloons, confetti and noisemakers were the features of the evening. The Pineola Orchestra furnished the music for dancing. The feature for next Wednesday's dance will be a Country Store Dance. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

Ottawa, May 12 (AP).—Discussion in the House of Commons on the whiskers of Hector Charlesworth, chairman of the Canadian Radio Commission, drew a reprimand last night from R. B. Bennett, premier of the dominion.

F. G. Sanderson, Liberal, said Charlesworth should be told to "bridle his tongue." J. F. Pouliot, another Liberal, shouted: "Take his tongue and twist it seven times around his whiskers!"

Felix Quinn, Conservative, shouted: "Listen to the jackass!"

The premier asked Quinn to retract his remark about a fellow member. Quinn retracted. But Pouliot let his remark on Charlesworth's beard stand.

"When he shaves, I will retract," he said.

Eel From On High

Fairhaven, N. J.—Charles O. Britton is a fish seller.

It was therefore a matter of no little surprise to him when he found a two and one-half pound eel the piece de resistance of his dinner.

Mrs. Britton said it fell into the yard from the beak of a fish-hawk attacked by another hawk.

Sea Gives Up Its Dead

Hoboken, N. J.—Before Herman Tomfelde died last December, he directed that his ashes be scattered over the sea. He had been a sailor many years.

The ashes were entrusted to a brother, Oscar, steward on the Bremen. He threw them into the sea, container and all, in mid-Atlantic.

The container washed up ashore at Terschelling, Scotland. Authorities there, noting the name of the undertaker cabled word of their find and are awaiting the family's instructions on what to do with the ashes.

This Is Silly.

Canaan, Conn.—A gander on the Krause farm refused to be outdone by the females of his species. Finding two geese setting, waiting for their eggs to hatch, he followed suit—taking his post on an empty coffee can.

Dickens For Modern Gaits.

Detroit—Arthur Reamer, 33, convicted of directing the stealing activities of a group of youths, will study Dickens for the next 45 days.

"Have you ever heard of Fagin?" asked the judge in passing sentence. The prisoner shook his head.

"Have you never read Oliver Twist?" Again Reamer shook his head.

"I'll send a copy to your cell," said the judge, "and I order you to read it before you are released."

Asks No Quarter.

New York—Thomas Coyle considered it unsoldierly to ask anyone's help. Eighty-seven years old and a veteran of the Civil War, he was found in a stable, very ill of starvation and a stroke. Friends said he had never asked the government for a pension.

Chokes on His Teeth.

Cincinnati—Edward Mueller, accused slayer of his wife and daughter-in-law, was found choking in his jail cell. Physicians discovered his upper plate of false teeth lodged in his throat. "Attempted suicide" said the police.

Another Cure.

Los Angeles—Instead of committing to state institutions all inordinate drinkers who are brought before him in psychopathic court, Superior Judge Thomas C. Gould orders the more promising ones to write essays on the evils of drink. He believes the defining of distressing experiences in written terms has a salutary effect.

Food and Beauty.

Cincinnati, O.—Dr. Frank S. Slutz, Dayton, O., told the Ohio Restaurant Association good-looking waiters and waitresses help their business.

"There is no man so decrepit," he said, "that he does not like to be waited on by a nice-looking girl. There is no woman so old but that her heart does not thrill to a nice-looking man."

New Use of Lie Detector.

Chicago—How the lie detector—a mechanical device used for recording emotions in criminal cases, may be used to restore domestic bliss, was told in court by Attorney Harry C. Cole.

He reported to Judge Joseph Sabath that Mrs. Gladys Clissold, who had a suspicious husband, had offered to prove she was telling the truth by submitting herself to the lie detector. That convinced Mr. Clissold and the couple are living together again in happiness.

Try To Prevent STOMACH ULCERS

Just think of it—out of every 500 men and women you know, 400 have acid stomach—of these 400 people 57 probably have stomach ulcers—your doctor knows all this. Acid stomach causes gas, belching and indigestion, and when this distressed condition continues day after day it becomes a strain on your health.

When acid stomach upsets your digestion don't wait too long—the relief you beg for is easy to get—ask McBride Drug Stores or any druggist for a package of Bisurated Magnesia—it's inexpensive, yet priceless—in just a few days you'll know that your ordinary stomach troubles are over—happy days will come again with pleasant to take Bisurated Magnesia—not a laxative.

Note: Bisurated is urged purely as a corrective for excess stomach acid, not as an ulcer cure—if you have reason to believe you have ulcers consult your physician—keeping your stomach in good shape with Bisurated is one way to prevent them.—Advt.

Butcher Locks Up Thief in Ice Box

Grand Junction, Colo.—A burglar was kept on ice when E. T. McPheters, meat market operator, surprised two men in the act of robbing his store.

McPheters, who sleeps in the market, was awakened by the prowlers. He took one of the burglars prisoner and summoned police.

While waiting for the officers to arrive he noticed the door of the ice box ajar and looked in. When the police arrived they found the second man locked in the ice box, threatened with chills and frost bites.

ADMITS BURNING WIFE AND CHILD

Canadian Wanted Insurance to Pay Debts.

Owen Sound, Ont.—How Melville Wilkie, twenty-three, made flaming torches of his twenty-year-old wife, Gertrude, and their six-month-old infant daughter, Norma, in order that he might collect his wife's $1,000 insurance policy, pay his debts, and "work in peace," was detailed to a crowded and horror-stricken courtroom in Owen Sound at the young man's preliminary hearing.

One night the Wilkie home burned down. The baby perished where she lay in her cot. Mrs. Wilkie, in bed, was burned so badly that she died shortly afterwards in a hospital. Wilkie, it seemed, was out.

Chief of Police T. H. Carson was suspicious of the circumstances. He questioned Wilkie and after contradictions in his statements had been pointed out to him he confessed.

"Whenever I came home there were letters there asking for money or some one there looking for money," he told the police chief. "My wife had a $500 policy with double indemnity in case of accidental death and I thought if I got that I could pay off all I owed and go on and work in peace.

"I stepped in the door," he proceeded, "and stood for a few minutes and went upstairs. The baby was stirring. I went over to the carriage and tried to quiet her. She started to cry. I picked her up. I carried her to another room and put her to sleep. Then I poured some gasoline on the clothes that were piled on a little chest between the door and the dresser. I took the rest of the gasoline and poured it on the floor; took the can into another room and put it behind the door.

"I went into the bedroom and turned off the light, stepped back into the hall, and pulled the bedroom door shut, took a match from my pocket, lit it on my pants and threw it on the floor in the hall. The gasoline was running out between the two doors. I grabbed my hat and coat and ran downstairs."

Ghost in Jail Corridor Brings Lawyer's Arrest

Bucharest.—A new method of advertising was invented by Constantine Stama, attorney at law, stationed in Cluj, Transylvania.

The warden of the local prison received several complaints from the convicts that a ghost was walking every night through the main dormitory and was frightening them by its strange behavior.

Detectives were sent to investigate the mystery and discovered that a man, wearing a white sheet, passed several times every night through the dormitory. As soon as he made his appearance, he gave a piercing yell and proceeded to deliver in a hoarse voice the following speech:

"Those of you who do not want their bones to rot in this prison should ask the help of Lawyer Constantine Stama."

The ghost was arrested and it was found that it was the dormitory guard himself, Vasile Suci, who was paid by the lawyer to advertise the latter's services in this strange manner. The guard is now out of a job and the lawyer is behind the bars.

Mice Eat Man's Fortune; Shock of Loss Is Fatal

Belgrade.—Nesting mice in an attic robbed a farmer in Veleki Kidinda of his fortune and his life at one stroke. Without telling his wife, he had been saving for years in 20-dinar notes to buy a large farm for himself, hiding the money in a packing case in the attic over a granary.

Recently he decided to buy a farm which had been offered to him for 200,000 dinars. When he told his wife, she asked him with astonishment where he expected to find the money for the purpose. For answer he took her arm and led her to the packing case. When he opened it, he found the mice had left nothing for his fortune but a litter of paper. Horror-struck, he was seized with a heart attack and dropped dead.

Thieves Steal Concrete Walk Weighing 9 Tons

San Pedro, Calif. — Police were amused when Nick Chapelle reported that some one had stolen his concrete sidewalk.

But it proved to be true when they found a 50-foot stretch of sectional concrete walk that had adorned Chapelle's property had vanished.

"Let's see," said one policeman, "at 145 pounds per cubic foot, that sidewalk must have weighed nine tons."

Neighbors May Lop Off Overhanging Tree Limbs

A man was fined five guineas for damaging two trees belonging to his landlord, says an English paper. He declared that he had applied to the landlord to have them cut down and, when permission was refused, lopped them.

The judge told him that he was lucky to get off with a fine for, by the Malicious Damage act, a person is liable to five years penal servitude for cutting down a growing tree.

A curious case of the same sort came up at Kingstown when a woman was accused of "poisoning" a tree. It was a large poplar standing on a neighbor's land and the defendant said, the roots were ruining her lawn.

The magistrate said that while the defendant had a right to cut away the offending roots, she had no right to use poison; and she was fined two pounds. She had also to pay five pounds compensation and five guineas costs.

Tree law is curious. Most people are under the impression that, if a fruit tree belonging to a neighbor has branches hanging over their wall or fence, they have a right to the fruit. They are wrong. They have not only no right to the fruit, but the owner of the tree may enter the other person's land to gather his fruit or to pick up windfalls.

Yet when the tree is not in fruit the person over whose land branches hang may lop those branches.—Montreal Herald.

Egypt's Famous Blue Is Reproduced by Chemists

Ancient Egypt's famous blue no longer is a secret of the dead, for modern chemists have analyzed and reproduced it. An exhaustive study resulted in discovery of its constituents, says Popular Mechanics Magazine, and in its artificial production. Other studies of pigments showed they were almost exclusively of mineral origin and were laid on a prepared surface from a water suspension containing some sticky substance, probably glue. In this work in old Egypt, chemists have given invaluable aid, spraying frail objects with a celluloid solution to stiffen them for handling, separating corroded objects, soaking wooden articles in hot paraffin to prevent splitting or warping, and doing other services that have resulted in the permanent preservation of many priceless antiques. In much of his work, the chemist used simple apparatus and simple methods to get amazing results, frequently revealing the secrets of arts once considered lost in the tombs of the Egyptians.—Detroit News.

Find Gem-Studded Gold Blade

Near Alt-Lussheim, in the historic soil of the Rhine plateau between the hills of the Odenwald and the Haardt, the remains of a gem-studded golden sword have been found. Scientists ascribe it to the period of the Migration of the Peoples, around 450 A. D. According to ancient saga, Siegfried and Kriemhild lived at that time, and it is possible that the sword belonged to some hero of the Nibelung period. The find is on exhibition in the Electoral Palatinate museum in Heidelberg.

Gecko, Quick Change Artist

A little-known tropical creature called the fimbriated gecko is a rapid quick-change artist, for it can make itself practically invisible at a distance of a foot. During the day it clings against its resting place, which may be the bark of a tree covered with lichen, and every changing hue of the latter is faithfully reproduced upon the body of the gecko. The body itself is flanged with irregular lobes of skin, which help to fade it into the background, but its bright eye will often give it away.

Progress of Matches

The friction match, first made in 1827, consisted of splinters of wood dipped in fused sulphur and then tipped with a mixture composed essentially of antimony sulphide, chlorate of potash and some adhesive gum. Later, in 1835, the phosphorus friction match was produced, which ignited when rubbed against a rough surface. The safety match (1865), so called because it would in general strike only on a prepared box, simply transferred the phosphorus from the tip of the striking match to the side of the box.

Ireland Not Home of Potato

Ireland is not the home of the Irish potato. Its original home was western South America where it was found and taken to Europe by explorers who were in search of gold. The potato did not win immediate favor in Europe. War, famine, and kingly decrees first were necessary before it gained popularity. In Scotland it was considered for many years the forbidden fruit that got Adam and Eve into everlasting disgrace.

"BRAKE" BALLOON DISCARDED FOR COSYNS' AIR VENTURE

Brussels (AP).—Max Cosyns, the young engineer who accompanied Prof. August Piccard on last year's trip to the stratosphere, has abandoned as too hazardous his plan to use a "brake balloon" on his own forthcoming ascent.

Instead he has perfected a device to stop his balloon at will for scientific tests.

"It consists of a folding tube bellows in the middle of the balloon and reaching frrom the top to the gondola," said Cosyns. "When the top of the tube is in contact with the hydrogen which occupies only the upper part of the bag, the gas will flow out slowly by way of the tube and will furnish me with an exact control."

Financial and Commercial

New York, May 12 (AP).—The advance in the financial markets was retarded, although not altogether checked, by heavy profit-taking today.

The stock market was a mixed affair, with numerous specialties, and utilities moving higher, while leading industrials and some of the rails reacted fractions to more than a point. In the staple markets, corn advanced more than a cent, but an early upturn in wheat was mostly [illegible] slipped off a little, then recovered.

In shares, beer and alcohol issues were high fliers, National Distillers and Owens Illinois Glass rose 5 to 6 points, while Crown Cork gained 3. American Telephone was also a strong spot, up about 3.

Considerable short covering appeared in American Telephone in advance of the dividend meeting next week. Wall Street has recently been convinced that a substantial downward revision would be made in the annual rate of $9, but in view of the improved business outlook, is now inclined to be somewhat more cheerful.

Business news remained largely cheerful. Tomorrow's freight car loadings report is expected to come very close to the like level of last year, although it may be somewhat under the previous week. Bituminous coal output was reported for the week ended May 6 at 4,835,000 tons, or 350,000 over the like period of last year. Textile and rubber tire manufacturers are running at capacity in many cases. Dun & Bradstreet's Weekly Review said a steadily gaining volume of retail trade was reported from many centers, with dollar volume in many districts running ahead of a year ago.

OCEAN DEPTHS GIVE UP RARE CREATURES

Show Evolution Wrought by Struggle for Survival.

Washington, D. C.—Under the tossing surface of the southern seas is an inferno-like world of everlasting darkness inhabited by multitudes of curious creatures which exist almost altogether by the laws of claw and talon.

Such is the picture of conditions a few hundred fathoms below the surface of the Puerto Rico Deep, the deepest part of the Atlantic ocean, as they were found by Dr. Paul Bartsch, Smithsonian institution biologist who led the Johnson-Smithsonian deep-sea expedition which has just returned to Washington. Some of the creatures brought back by Bartsch, many of them believed new to science, are grotesque beyond the reaches of a nightmare.

Many Strange Forms.

As the collection is unpacked more and more strange forms of fishes, crustaceans and mollusks are revealed which, while closely related to surface forms, differ weirdly because of their utterly different environment.

Countless generations ago their ancestors, driven by quest of food, abandoned the familiar sunlit world for the perpetual night of the abysmal depths, where the temperature never rises above freezing. Then, with each family, it was a case of survival of the fittest—variation of form and structure to fit the environment.

Consequently there have emerged from this fierce struggle for survival creatures mostly conspicuous for their defensive and offensive equipment.

Among the weirdest specimens brought back by Bartsch was a shrimp with long, razorlike claws which fold up after the fashion of a razor. Any small creature that came within striking distance of those "razors" probably would be an immediate victim. In the collection are strange mollusks with shells like corkscrews and eels like darning needles but with long, sharp beaks. One of the most curious creatures found was a shrimp which burrows far into the interior of sticks of water-soaked wood for protection.

Food in "Cold Storage."

The reason the great depths are inhabited, Bartsch explained, is because of the sinking of vast numbers of dead organisms from the surface which, once they are below the freezing point, are preserved in perpetual cold storage. They furnish an enormous supply of "fresh meat." It is possible that surface animals followed this supply downward and gradually became adapted to the depths.

With this strange environment and living without any mitigating circumstances by the law of "eat or be eaten," the creatures developed forms which might be suitable to fabulous animals of another planet.

Considerable new light on fundamental laws of life is expected to develop from this systematic study of animals living and dying under such stygian conditions so different from anything known at the surface.

Mussolini's "Balilla" Plan Growing Rapidly

Rome.—The "Balilla" movement of Fascist children, between eight and twelve, now numbers 3,176,000. In 1928, it was 1,200,000. The movement is supposed to emphasize study, physical education and patriotism.

Fascists regard it as the keystone to the whole political and economic edifice laboriously built up. It is the school for the Fascist of tomorrow, the reservoir for soldiers, officials, politicians and the vast quantity of state servants required under a highly centralized system like Fascism.

The report of the growth of the movement shows that at the end of 1932 the balilla corps, which now includes girls as well as boys, while totaling 3,176,612 members of whom 3,149,125 were regularly inscribed and possessed membership cards contained 1,430,000 boy balillas, 1,186,569 piccole Italiane, or little Italian girls, 439,871 Vanguard lads and 119,769 young Italian girls (Giovani Italiane). The latter are girls of fourteen to sixteen.

The figures reveal the great growth of the movement among the girls of the country.

A Dog Bites the Man So Man Bites the Owner

Washington.—Havert Lee Phifer, negro, didn't like it, he explained, when he went to Mike Deep's store, because Mike's dog was always biting him. He didn't have a dog of his own to sick on Mike, so he settled things his own way.

First he bit Mike in the hand. When Patrolman H. A. Lord arrived, Phifer bit him, too.

Phifer explained it all in police court, but was sentenced to serve 60 days in jail, pay $10 for being drunk and $5 for disorderly conduct.

Grange Leaders Choose Officers

About 60 members of the Ulster County Grange Masters and Lecturers Association met at the Grange Hall in Milton on Wednesday evening and elected officers for 1933-34. I. C. Barnes of New Paltz was re-elected president; Charles Bloomer of Milton, vice president, and Albert Kurdt of Kingston, secretary-treasurer. This association consists of all Grange masters and lecturers, both past and present and all members of service and hospitality committees, as well as other interested patrons. The aims of the association are: To improve Grange programs by the exchange of ideas, to perfect Grange ritualism, encourage sociability among Grangers and promote the interests of Pomona Grange.

J. Wells Weaver of Clintondale, county deputy of the Grange, gave a very interesting and instructive talk in regard to Grange work and demonstrated, with the aid of others present, the correct form for carrying out various phases of Grange ritualism. Several other matters of importance to all rural people, such as the Milk Control Board and the proposed regional market area, were discussed briefly.

Those present then divided into three separate groups, one for masters, one for lecturers and another for members of service and hospitality committees. After these conferences the log-rolling ceremony, to be carried out during the summer and early fall, was demonstrated under the leadership of Mrs. C. O. Jenkins of Wallkill, the lecturer of Pomona Grange. This consists of visits of one grange to another at which time a simple but impressive ceremony, of building a log home for the future will be carried out and an effort made to raise some funds for the revolving scholarship fund. This is in the interest of higher education for young people. After this demonstration a delightful picnic supper was enjoyed by all present.

GROWERS CONSIDER MARKET NEEDS OF HUDSON VALLEY

Twenty five producers of fruits and vegetables from Delaware, Dutchess, Rockland, Sullivan and Ulster counties, together with the county agricultural agents from those counties, met at the Governor Clinton Hotel here on Thursday afternoon to consider the market needs of the lower Hudson Valley area. Walter Clarke of Milton acted as temporary chairman of the meeting and talks were given by H. E. Crouch of the state Department of Agriculture and Markets, F. A. Hopper of the New York State College of Agriculture and Earl A. Flansburgh, state county agent leader. Those present from Delaware and Rockland counties had already been appointed by the boards of supervisors as directors of the market authority.

After a presentation of the facts by the speakers and a rather long discussion, entered into by all present, it was decided that more information was needed before any definite decision could be made. The group felt that some large central wholesale market in the lower Hudson Valley would bring buyers into the territory. Several men stated that caution should be used in an entirely new undertaking of this kind and stressed the importance of having the best men available in the respective counties to serve on the board of directors.

Those present at the meeting from Ulster county included LeGrand Haviland of Highland, D. G. Crowell of Wallkill, Henry Schroeder of Saugerties, W. J. Haviland of Marlborough and Walter Clarke of Milton and Albert Kurdt, manager of the Farm Bureau. After the discussion it was unanimously voted to ask the Farm Management department of the State College of Agriculture to make a survey of the producers within the area, as to production and present distribution of their produce. The college agreed to do this in the near future and report to the group as soon as the work is completed.

MAYOR COMMENDS TAG DAY OF ST. MARK'S CHURCH

Office of the Mayor
CITY OF KINGSTON, NEW YORK
May 10, 1933

Rev. Cornelius B. Barrow,
Pastor St. Mark's A. M. E. Church,
Foxhall Avenue,
Kingston, N. Y.

My dear Rev. Barrow:

I understand that your church contemplates holding a tag day on May 13, 1933, on which day representatives of your church will stand on prominent corners within our city soliciting funds for your church. I know that your church is in need of immediate funds in order to carry on in a proper manner, and I know that the receipts of your tag day will be applied to such needs. It is a pleasure, therefore, for me to commend your cause to the people of our city, and I respectfully urge the residents of Kingston to purchase and wear a tag representing your cause on May 13.

Very truly yours,
EUGENE B. CAREY,
Mayor.

Automobile Engineers have unanimously agreed that the cooling systems of all automobiles should be thoroughly flushed and cleaned at least twice a year, to remove the sludge, rust, grease, etc., that clogs and insulates the entire cooling system,—which is primarily the cause of over-heating and other motor troubles.

To take care of this type of work we are now using a special chemical compound which is guaranteed to remove any accumulations that may be in the radiator or engine block.

Why not let us service your car now to assure you an efficient cooling system.

Hitting Marks Game As Repealers Trim Hardwaremen 13-4

The Morgan Repealers, with the aid of some prolific hitting by Charlie Tiano, continued their march toward the pennant of the City League by trouncing the Herzog Hardwaremen at the Athletic Field Thursday evening. The score was 13 to 4 and the win marked the third consecutive one for the opponents of the Eighteenth Amendment. As yet they haven't tasted defeat.

Tiano grabbed all the glory of the game by poling a home run with the bases loaded and driving in three other markers with two singles. His homer was the first one to be hit in the City League this season, and, of course, he cops the shirt and necktie offered by Sweeney & Schonger.

All of the Repealers, with the exception of Pres Knight, got at least one hit. In all they garnered 12 hits off the combined pitching of Ken Williams and Paul Misove.

Williams started on the mound for the Hardwaremen and struggled through two innings, but couldn't get by the third. He forced in two runs in this inning before he retired in favor of Misove. Misove took up the burden with the bases loaded and Tiano was the first man to greet him. What a greeting! Before Misove knew what it all was about the bases were unloaded as Tiano decided it was a good time to insert his circuit clout.

Ted Fraleigh opposed the Hardwaremen and was nicked for seven hits, which were mostly of the scratch variety. He never had much to worry about after the Repealers once took the lead.

The Hardwaremen held the lead once, but it was for only a brief spell. After the Repealers went out in their half of the first Banyo hit to right field and Hotaling bunted safely. Clayton also bunted and all hands were safe when Fraleigh elected to throw to third base only to be too late to catch Banyo. Banyo scored on Flanagan's infield out.

The Repealers took the lead with a four-run rally in the second and added six more in the third, one in the fourth and two in the last. The Hardwaremen's other runs came in the fifth and seventh.

SIDELINERS

The Hardwaremen might have won if they had kidnaped Charlie Tiano before the game started.

The Repealers objected strenuously to a decision at first base in the first inning, but to no avail.

Joe Blass said to Harold Clayton, "I have it" on Jimmy Morgan's fly in the third inning. Blass misjudged it badly and Morgan got a hit. Not so bad, hey Jimmy!

Someone should have informed "Woody" Wood that the ball game was being played on the Athletic Field. He was caught napping off first base once and the rest of the game he was anchored at third base.

Now that the shirt and necktie are gone the boys are wondering what merchant will offer the next prize.

Tagging Major League Bases

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The Cleveland Indians have captured first place in the American League and it may be quite a task to get them out of there.

When the campaign started, there was considerable doubt as to just where the Indians belonged. Now that they have settled into their stride with the pitchers going great guns and batters picking up, there's no longer any question about it.

Harder Checks Reds

Melvin Harder, youngest member of the mound staff, presented a clinching argument yesterday as he took personal charge of a 4 to 1 victory over the Boston Red Sox that gave Cleveland undisputed possession of the lead with a half game margin over the New York Yankees, who were kept idle in Chicago.

Harder held the Red Sox to six hits and walloped a homer for the run that put the Indians ahead to stay, after scoring the first run off Ivy Paul Andrews on a two base hit. Another bright spot appeared for the Indians when Joe Vosmik hit a single to break a string of 18 futile visits to the plate.

Washington dropped into fourth place in the only other American League game when the St. Louis Browns took the home run route to their second straight victory, 4 to 3. Oscar Melillo hit for the circuit with one on in the fifth and Ted Gullic, rookie outfielder from Koshkonong, Mo., repeated the feat in the ninth after Osslie Bluege's homer had put Washington ahead in the first half of the last inning.

O'Doul Out of Slump.

Frank O'Doul, National League batting champion, emerged from his customary spring batting slump, battered Paul Derringer for a homer and four singles, and drove in five Brooklyn Dodger runs in a 7-6 victory over the Cincinnati Reds. His last blow drove in the tying run in the tenth and enabled Jake Flowers to send home the winning counter.

Pittsburgh's league leading Pirates muddled through to a 7-6 victory over the second place New York Giants with the aid of four Giant errors and a dozen hits off Carl Hubbell. Freddy Lindstrom, making his first appearance in the Polo Grounds since he was traded by the Giants last winter, led the attack with three hits.

The reconstructed St. Louis infield and Southpaw Bill Hallahan held the Boston Braves in check to give the Cardinals a 2-1 victory. Hallahan gave only seven hits but it took some sparkling fielding by Pepper Martin, Leo Durocher and Pat Crawford to keep the Braves from getting more.

The game between the Chicago Cubs and the Phillies was rained out.

Head Play Looks Like Pimlico Choice

Baltimore, May 12 (AP).—With the skies overclouded and occasional rain, a heavy muddy track was in prospect tomorrow at Pimlico for the country's three-year old horses in the most historic of Maryland turf events—the Preakness.

Led by Col. E. R. Bradley's Brokers Tip, fresh from victory in the Kentucky Derby, the thoroughbreds will compete over a mile and three sixteenths course for a purse of more than $25,000 and for the coveted Woodlawn Cup.

A crowd of 30,000 is expected by Pimlico officials to be on hand to watch the race.

Notwithstanding the victory by Brokers Tip in the derby, he will hardly go to the post the favorite. Mrs. Silas B. Mason's Head Play, a colt she purchased for $30,000 on the eve of the derby, probably will have more backers than any other horse in the flashy field.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN J. GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

Burt Shotton, a great hustler in his own playing days and now one of the most aggressive pilots in the big leagues, has a fire-eater after his own heart and fancy in Dick Bartell.

The star shortstop of the Philadelphia Nationals has started the season in sensational style, fielding brilliantly, out-hitting even the great Chuck Klein and otherwise inserting a dynamic personality in the team's pennant drive.

Meanwhile he has carried on a personal feud with members of the Brooklyn Dodgers, to whom he has been a large order of poison all spring.

Eastern baseball scribes, at least, regard Bartell now as the outstanding shortstop in the National League. He is only 25, but is starting his sixth season in the majors. The Pirates got him originally from the semi-pro ranks around Butte, Montana, and put him on the regular payroll after a year's seasoning in the Eastern League with Bridgeport.

For some reason still a bit obscure, except for an explanation that the Pirates always have been lucky in developing good shortstops, Pittsburgh traded Bartell to the Phillies after the 1930 season. He has been getting better, steadier and scrappier every season. Dick needed no injunction from the league's chief executive to manifest a hustling, determined spirit on the ball field. He's a battler of the old school.

Glad He Kept Leslie

Bill Terry, instead of being downcast over being out of the game with a broken wrist, has been going around congratulating himself on his far-sightedness in refusing the flattering offers of fellow managers last winter for the services of his big understudy, Sam Leslie.

They had been telling Terry that Leslie was much too good a ball player to be kept on the bench, that he had no chance to break in on Terry's own job at first base and that the Giants would be better off trading Sam for a reliable pitcher.

Terry weighed the proposals without having any idea he would be out of the game in April for the first time in four years, and decided to keep Leslie. It was good insurance. When mishap befel the Giants' young manager, Sam jumped in at once to deliver a telling blow against the enemy. He has filled the pilot's shoes so acceptably that Terry felt called on to suggest he might have trouble winning back a playing job when he recovered.

Babe Nimble First Sacker

Which reminds us that if and when any untoward circumstance snaps Lou Gehrig's playing streak at first base, the Yankees will replace him temporarily with that young fellow now disporting himself in right field—Babe Ruth.

The Babe handles himself nimbly around first base and likes it, because he doesn't have to roam over as much ground as in the outfield. Fred Walker or Sammy Byrd could fill the great man's place in the outer patrol, but Manager Joe McCarthy, being a very superstitious gent, would prefer not to discuss this subject at all, even to help a fellow fill up a few paragraphs of gossip.

Following there will be a game between the Twaalfskill Hose team and that of St. Mary's Holy Name Society. This will start at 3:30.

Strong, Comfortable Feet Vital To Sound Golf Game

This is the eighth of a series in which Gene Sarazen, British and American Open golf champion, tells the average golf player how to cut strokes from his score.

By GENE SARAZEN
World Golf Champion
(As Told to Alan Gould)

Most golfers, including a lot of our best tournament players, pay too little attention to their feet.

Proper footwork is a factor too often neglected in our modern teaching of the game, although there has been steady improvement since the old days when we were taught that it was the proper thing to lift the left heel so that it pointed to the hole.

Now, the good player barely lifts his heel at all. He stands well balanced, with feet fairly close together, not spread wide apart or anchored awkwardly so that the swing is hampered.

You have missed something if you failed to study the footwork of stars like Walter Hagen or Bob Jones. To me it was a thing of beauty to watch.

Strength in the Feet

Three-fourths of a golfer's strength comes from his feet; not only the way he uses them but how well he is shod. It is important to wear the right kind of shoes.

Nothing will tire a man out quicker than bad shoes, and I mean tire him out mentally, as well as physically. If he wonders why he feels "fagged out" toward the end of the round or why he can't go 36 in one day without finishing weakly, it's probably because he has not outfitted his feet properly.

Ever since I learned that lesson myself I have had my own shoes made to order, and I always inspect a pupil's footwear along with his clubs, stance and grip.

Advocates Thick Soles

I advocate thick soles. I can recall noticing the shoes worn by Harry Vardon and Ted Ray, the famous British professionals. They were heavy-soled and comfortable. They never had any trouble with their feet

Although he now is 63, Harry Vardon, famous British professional, still can breeze through 36 holes in a day. Sarazen ascribes Vardon's endurance to the excellent care he always has taken of his feet. Gene has his own shoes made to order.

as a result, and Vardon, now 63, still can go 36 holes a day.

Between rounds it is a good idea to change shoes or wear a pair of slippers to ease the feet. Take good care of them and they will carry you through to a strong finish; neglect them and your golfing days in comfort will be numbered.

Pan-Ams to Play Albany Hershys

Opponents of the Pan Ams in their regular Sunday game at the Saugerties road diamond will be the Albany Hershys, Johnny Ashdown, booking manager, said this morning, explaining that he did not announce the opposing team before because he was not certain about the appearance of the Albanians. All arrangements have been settled now, however, and he and "Dutch" Glaser, manager, feel certain that there will be a wonderful battle on Sunday afternoon.

Glaser has signed three new men for the Pan Ams—Tod Miller, third baseman; Andy Feldmesser of Brooklyn, and Norm Niles of Kingston, shortstops. Other than the new men named, the rest of the lineup will be the same that gave the West Point Service Club such a hard fight last week, losing out by the narrow margin of 11-13.

Sunday's game is scheduled for 3:15 and the opposing lineups are as follows:

Hershys—J. Hershy, capt., 1b; Al Domes, 2b.; J. Powers, ss.; C. Clifford, 3b.; G. Newkirk, rf.; J. Fink, cf.; Si Roth lf.; S. Barton, p.; D. Schakter, c.

Horseshoe Champ Here on Sunday

Doc Grube, local horseshoe pitching impresario, today announced a big match at his Chambers street court for Sunday afternoon at 2:30, featuring his team against the Poughkeepsie Bearcats, a club that has with it Harold Seaman of Hyde Park, the state champion.

Grube hopes that there will be a large turnout of spectators to witness the match which he knows will be a real hard one for his men, although they are among the best barnyard golfers in the city. Besides himself, Doc will have in his lineup Johnny Swint, Joe Fisher and Johnny Bailey, the boy who won second place in the horseshoe pitching contest at Forsyth Park last summer.

Kingston High Wins From Saugerties

Kingston High finally played a baseball game, after bad weather had led to the postponement of three games against Saugerties High varsity Thursday afternoon and won 12-2. Lefty Martin was on the mound for the Maroon and allowed only five hits, while the Kingston batsmen banged 12 safeties.

Martin turned in a good piece of work. He kept Saugerties well in hand for five of the seven innings played. It was in the second and seventh that the damage was done to a good record—one run was scored in both of these innings.

In the second frame Martin slipped up on control and walked Terwilliger and Keenan. These free passes were followed by an error that led to the first run. But then the boys settled down until the seventh when a single by Terwilliger was followed by a fly that advanced him a base and an error by Gilmore, which allowed the other score.

Terwilliger got two hits and scored both of Saugerties runs and Martin, besides striking out eight men got two hits.

The Kingston lineup backed Martin's efforts on the mound. They came through with runs in four of the seven innings—two in the first, three in the second, three in the fifth and four in the sixth. These runs were brought across the plate by the three-base hit of Captain Ed Burgevin, who also hit one in the game against Newburgh, and doubles by Lamb and Debrosky along with singles by J. Tiano, Martin, Lamb, Debrosky, Greiner and Linden.

The Maroon varsity plays Saugerties High again Saturday afternoon on the Kingston Fair Grounds at 2:30 o'clock.

Ulster County Gun Club Scores

Five members of the Ulster County Gun Club held a practice shoot at their traps Thursday evening. The good light, mild weather and lack of wind made the shooting especially pleasant and good scores were in evidence.

Anyone wishing to shoot at clay targets will always find a few shooters each Thursday afternoon at the club grounds on the Plank Road.

The club has been assured of at least two challenges in the near future from out of town clubs for the B. J. Winne Team Trophy, which is now held by the Ulster County Gun Club.

Thursday's scores:

F. Chaffee	20+23	=43
B. J. Winne	20+23	=43

CHURCH LEAGUE MEETING; KNIGHTS OUT OF LOOP

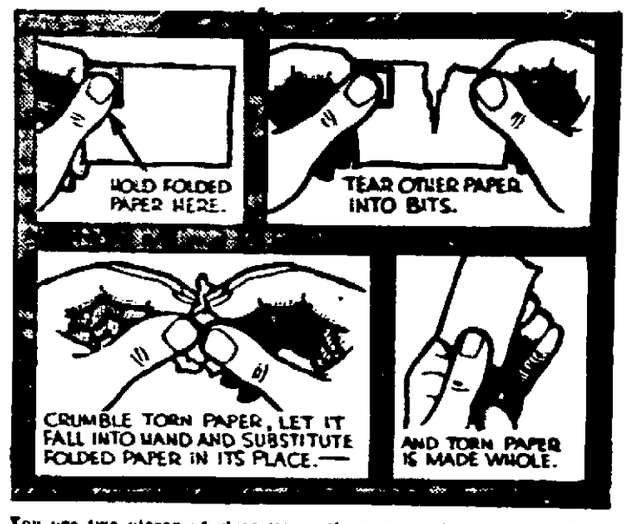
The Athletic Committee of Kingston Council, Knights of Columbus, has decided that the Caseys will not play in the Downtown Church League, but will wait for the second round of the City League to open and enter a team in that loop.

This decision was announced today by Grand Knight Matthew Cahill, who was unaware that a member of the Knights had entered a team in the Church League, unauthoratively. Other nines in the league are St. Mary's Holy Name, Trinity M. E., Church of the Redeemer, Ponckhockie Congregational and Connelly M. E.

A meeting of the league will be held this evening at the Knights of Columbus building, Broadway and Andrew street, at 7:15.

TRICKS of MAGIC EXPLAINED by Will L. Lindhurst

HOW TO TEAR A PAPER AND MAKE IT WHOLE AGAIN



You use two pieces of cigarette or tissue paper in this trick. Fold one piece into a small square and conceal it back of your hand, where it is held between two fingers. Spread out the other piece, and in doing so, move the folded piece from the back of your hand to a corner of the displayed paper, hold it there beneath your thumb and, of course, place it behind the paper where it cannot be seen. Then tear the displayed piece into several bits, but be careful and not disturb the folded paper under your thumb. Crumble these bits into a small ball, let this drop into the palm of your hand and bring forth the folded piece. As you unfold it, the audience will be mystified upon seeing the torn paper made whole and you can then place your hand in your pocket and offer to wager with anyone that the trick cannot be duplicated. This pretext to secure a coin from your pocket is merely a way to dispose of the torn bits of paper.

HIGH SPEED IS AIM OF ALL AIR LINES

Millions Being Invested in New Equipment.

New York, N. Y.—How every major airline in the United States is today re-equipping its lines with high-speed planes capable of average speeds up to 240 miles per hour is revealed in Fortune Magazine.

The move "quite certainly changes the commercial geography of the United States," the magazine says, for it "brings Albuquerque, N. M., as close to New York as express trains long ago brought Boston and Washington." A revolution in air travel this coming summer is forecast as a result of these spectacular new ships.

All Out for Speed.

"There is under way nothing less than the re-equipping of this continent's airlines," Fortune states. "Commitments now in the hundreds of thousands of dollars will be in the millions if these harbingers of speed perform successfully.

"Every major airline begins this summer with a program which will lead to the complete replacement of its slow (110 m. p. h) present-day tri-motor transports with completely new high-speed (150-180 m. p. h.) airplanes.

"The new planes are low-wing monoplanes. All are built of metal throughout. With one tri-motor exception, all are powered by single or twin engines.

"In every case, high speed is achieved not by tremendous horse power but by sleek streamlining and elimination of drag. With one exception the new ships can fold their landing gear in flight. Lest the pilot forget to lower his gear before descending, each has some kind of alarm to jostle his memory the moment he closes the throttle below flying speed."

Will Cut Costs.

Fortune points out that while in the other forms of transportation speed is bought only at the price of higher direct and indirect costs, "paradoxically, the economics of aviation is such that the purchase of its most essential asset, speed, may turn out not merely a sound investment but the means of an actual saving—perhaps as high as 20 to 25 per cent."

The ship and the pilot, both covering half as many miles again in a given time as they did before, spell reduced costs. With insurance and depreciation about the same, practically "all other costs will vary in inverse ratio to the speed: maintenance, because it is a better-built, all-metal job going farther between overhauls; even fuel and oil, since our new ship was speeded up not by increasing its power but by perfecting its lines and since it has one or two motors instead of three."

Mail Clerks See 288 Varieties of Spelling

Maquoketa, Iowa.—There is only one Maquoketa, but there are 288 ways of spelling or trying to spell it. C. V. Phillips, postal clerk here for several years, has listed some of the variations as Macoca, Marrokita, Macetah and McCoday. The simplest spelling was on a letter addressed to Maqe, the writer apparently having given up in disgust when he reached that point.

Presumably all the mail destined for Maquoketa ultimately reaches here, no matter how odd the spelling. Mail clerks are almost inclined to believe that everything remotely resembling that name comes here first. One such was a letter mailed in Holland and addressed to Modjo-Kerto, Java, which is a long way from here.

Robin Pecks at Image Until Screen Stops It

Richmond.—The widely publicized penchant of robins for attacking their images in mirrors or window panes for days at a time was exhibited here recently in a new light.

A robin perched outside the window of the home of Lloyd H. Williams recently saw what seemed to be another bird of the same species on the opposite side of the glass and forthwith began pecking away. Six days later he was still pecking.

Finally Williams became annoyed and placed a screen over the window, so that the bird was unable to see the reflection. With bill blunted by nearly a week of pecking, the robin flew away.

British Women Doctors Seek Place in Council

London.—Women doctors of England are opening a campaign for representation on the general medical council. The movement was started by Dr. Jane Walker, a London consultant, and Dr. Letitia Fairfield, senior medical officer of the London county council since 1911.

They declare that as the great majority of matters which come before the medical council concern practitioners and patients of both sexes women should help in making the decisions.

Giraffe Tallest, Also One of Oddest Animals

The giraffe is the tallest and one of the queerest animals known to man. It has the head of a horse, the neck and hoof of a stag, the callous breast of the camel, and the spotted skin of the leopard. On its forehead are two horn excrescences which have no particular use at all.

Fully grown, a giraffe is about 18 feet tall. It lives in the wooded plains of central Africa, generally in small groups, and feeds mainly on the leaves of trees. Despite its ungainly shape, it is graceful and can make remarkable speed. Even the agile Arabian horse cannot overtake it.

Lions, however, are more than a match for it. They are the worst enemies of the giraffe. They lie in wait for the long-necked beast near streams and springs where they come to drink.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Conner Blamed As Murderer of Quick and $50 when she left last September to go home.

Asked if she had ever heard Quick discuss the disposition of his property in the presence of Baessler or Conner she said she had, in Baessler's presence.

On December 31 1932 at Baessler's she had a conversation with Baessler. It was in the restaurant. Mrs. Fish said at that time Baessler said:

"Listen you take him up on his offer. I'll take him for a ride."

Mrs. Fish said she replied, "Anton you would not do anything like that." To that she said he replied, "No, I won't but Mike will. You won't know anything about it. It will be an automobile accident. His car will go off the bank. You stay away a few days."

Mrs. Fish said she had told Anton at that time, "I won't do it."

On January 1 she remained at Baessler's and returned to Quick's on January 2. Mrs. Baessler and Mrs. Fish went to Quick's that day. Next Wednesday she said Mrs. Baessler went to the Kingston Hospital. She, Anton and Ed. Rose went along.

Refuses To "Take Him Over

On January 11, a Wednesday, she and Quick went to Baessler's place. At that time Anton called her into the cellar off the restaurant while Quick was in the restaurant. On that day she said Baessler said, "Take him over" and she had replied, "I told you I would have nothing to do with it".

She said Baessler asked why and she said because she would not.

On January 11 she and Quick came to Kingston and stopped first at Harry Merritt's and then drove to the Kingston Savings Bank where Quick drew out some money and placed it in his pocket. Quick told her how much but she did not see the money.

The next she saw Baessler was on January 15, according to her story. Baessler and Conner came to Quick's and asked her to go to the hospital. Quick said she could not go but Anton said the doctor wanted to see her and they left around 10 o'clock.

On the way to Kingston she said Conner said he could not see what strings Quick had on her that she had to ask his permission to leave and remarked that, "I feel like knocking him".

After visiting the hospital they returned to the Kerhonkson restaurant and she stayed all night there. Quick came there in the afternoon and she heard Baessler say he had left Mrs. Fish in Kingston. Quick left.

After Quick had left that day she said Baessler said to her, "Get him to sign over and Mike is the boy who will do the job." That was about 6 o'clock. She returned next morning to Quick's. Baessler took her back.

Next Sunday, January 22, was the next she saw Baessler or Conner. They both came to Quick's about 9 o'clock. Baessler asked her to go to Kingston and Quick objected saying that she had gone the last Sunday and had not returned to get dinner. She said she promised to get back in time to get dinner and they left.

Cross examined by Mr. Loughran concerning this time she said they had not been drinking at that time. Baessler or Conner had no odor on their breath. In the car were two bottles of liquor, one gin, the other apple. On way to Kingston they drank. It was in a medicine bottle. It was not all consumed on the trip. There was some apple left when they arrived at Kerhonkson about noon. They all went in and had two or three drinks there and then she and Baessler went up to Quick's. Conner remained at the restaurant.

Arriving at Quick's place she said Quick was sulky and said it had not taken them from 10 to 1:45 to go to the hospital. When Mrs. Baessler came home he said he was going to ask her if Mrs. Fish had visited her every Sunday at the hospital. Quick said he was "sick and disgusted."

Baessler and Mrs. Fish ate dinner. She had chicken, pot pie, mashed potatoes, yellow wax beans. It was about 4 when they finished dinner. Quick refused to eat.

After eating Baessler said, according to the witness, that he was sorry Quick would not eat because he had eaten.

Went For Conner

After dinner Baessler told the witness that he would go and get Mike and bring him up for a chicken dinner, she said. That was 4.15 when he left. Quick ate after Baessler left.

At 5:30 Baessler and Conner returned and Quick said when they arrived, "Back again."

It was about this time that Baessler asked for a jack to fix his tire and Quick said "Mamie will show where it is".

Mrs. Fish said she had placed Conner's dinner on his plate and he was in the dining room eating. He asked her for bread and she went down into the cellar and got a loaf of bread. When she came up the outside steps she left one of the cellar doors open. They are double trap doors. At that time Baessler was in the wicker chair, Conner at the dining room table and Quick in a leather chair in the dining room.

Baessler and she went out to the garage for a jack. The door was locked and after Baessler showed her the flat they started back to get the garage door key. At that time it was about 5:45 and dark. The lights were on in the house and the shades were down.

As she went on the porch she heard Quick say, "don't hit me". She heard a blow and as she went in saw Conner and Quick in the dining room. Conner's hand was raised and he had something in it. Quick's hands were over his head and there was blood on his face. She told of Quick calling to her and of the door being shut and of her going outside after it became quiet in the dining room. Baessler she said went in the dining room and closed the door.

After the body of Quick had been thrown down the cellar steps she said she returned and aided in cleaning up. She said she picked up the glasses and said, "Here are Mr. Quick's glasses" and Conner took them.

She told of gathering up cooking pots and the rags, sewing machine cover, table cloth and a plate and putting them in the rear of the Baessler car. Baessler she said took them out.

It was 6:45 when they left. The lamp was burning. She first removed the table cloth which was bloody and put on one from the dirty clothes.

Mrs. Fish told of getting stuck in the mud and of Conner handing the pots and pans to Baessler, who put them behind a stone wall fence. She and Conner started to walk and Baessler went for aid. She lost her rubber in the mud and later identified a rubber shown her as the one she lost.

After walking a way she and Conner sat down for a time and later a woman came out of a house and they inquired their way to Kerhonkson. Baessler later came along in a car and picked them up. They returned to the restaurant.

At the restaurant she asked Baessler if Mike had killed Quick and if he had taken his money. She said Baessler said he did not know and told her to keep still about it.

That night she said Baessler said to her that he had told her he was going to bring Mike back to Quick's for dinner and he guessed that he had gotten in trouble. He told her Mike thought he was going to get something out of it but that he was going to get rid of Mike by taking him to Stamford.

Next day she said Baessler told her to burn her dress which had blood on it. Baessler had given her one rubber and she burned that.

Monday Baessler went for his car where it was stuck and brought her to Kingston. After passing the Mettacahonts road he turned around and they went back where the pans and pots were hidden and placed them in the car and they were placed in a woods past Quick's.

While passing Quick's she was in the bottom of the car. As they passed she said Anton said the cellar door was still open.

She said Baessler told her she would be the first to be questioned and told her to say that they left at 6 o'clock and everything was all right then at Quick's.

She told of Baessler visiting her at McGrane's and of his telling her to write a letter to Quick asking him to come and meet her. He told her to take a taxi to Quick's when he told her to and to ask the driver to wait while she went to the house for money to pay. She told him she had no money and he gave her some for the taxi fare. She said Baessler told her that she was to discover the body and inform the neighbors.

He visited her several times at McGrane's and once she asked if Mike had robbed Quick and she said Baessler replied, "he has probably rolled him".

She told of Baessler's requesting her to write a letter to Quick and of her complying the next day. She identified the letter.

Thursday night was the last she saw Baessler until after the arrests at the court house.

Mr. Loughran then took up cross-examination.

15 New Houses Are Under Construction

Since the first of the year permits for 15 new houses have been issued with Fire Chief Joseph L. Mann at the Central Fire Station, as construction work is now underway. One plan was filed in January, three in February, four in March, five in April and two so far this month. The houses are located in various sections of the city. Among the plans filed is one for a new home for Alderman-at-large C. J. Heiman on West Chestnut street which the foundation has already been laid.

Still Good Doctrine

Other republics have failed because the citizens gradually grew to consider the interests of the class against the whole. For when such is the case it mattered not whether the people plundered the rich or the rich exploited the poor; in either case the end of the republic was at hand. We must resolve not to fall into such a pit. This great republic of ours shall never become the government of an aristocracy and it shall never become the government of a mob.—Theodore Roosevelt.

Curly's Return

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"What is your name?" Willy Nilly asked the little white poodle dog as they started off. "Mine," he continued, "is Willy Nilly, and this is Rip."

"My name is Curly," answered the little dog. "You see I have curly hair and when I was only a baby dog I was given to my little mistress for a birthday present. Her name is Mahalia and when she saw me she said:

"'Oh, you dear curly little dog! I do believe I'll name you Curly.' Don't you think her name of Mahalia is a lovely name too?"

"One of the nicest names I ever heard," said Willy Nilly.

Rip was nudging Willy Nilly. "Will you excuse us, Curly, if I whisper something to Willy Nilly? I know it's not good dog manners, but I'm afraid my manners aren't very perfect."

"Oh, we must all have secrets sometimes," agreed Curly.

"I thought," whispered Rip to Willy Nilly, "that I could take Curly back to Mahalia. I know where she lives—in that village where you went last winter in the blizzard. Then you can stay and do your work."

"It's a long distance," answered Willy Nilly, "and Curly is not used to long walks as you are. His legs are so small that he gets tired quickly and I thought I'd carry him part of the way."

So they trudged on for awhile and then Willy Nilly carried Curly the rest of the way.

"Oh, bow-wow-wow-bow-wow-wow," suddenly exclaimed Curly as he bounded from Willy Nilly's arms. "I can see our house!"

Never did a happier little dog run on four legs toward his home.

Triangle Club Show Scored Hit

The Kingston Triangle Club scored a hit with its benefit variety show Tuesday evening in the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium before a large and appreciative audience.

The Youth Council Orchestra with Sherwood Lasher conducting opened the program with several lively musical numbers.

Eileen and Buddy Oulten with Margaret Galvin won plenty of applause with their fast moving act. Musical accompaniment was rendered by John Dunn.

The well known Smith Brothers were imitated in an excellent manner by little Teddy and Eddy Weyhe. Marion and Majorie Bartlett gave several clever Scotch dances, while the O'Reilly twins captivated the audience with their military dancing and also with a very clever dance number dressed as farmer boys.

The Husser Girls, a group of four young ladies, danced several military numbers.

When a group of about 20 Y. M. C. A. boys took the stage they made a big hit.

John Murphy and Joseph Sparling provided a real novel dance number in their presentation of their dice dance, accompanied on the piano by Miss Selma Lehr. Later in the program they presented a tumbling act.

Kenneth Newell, accompanied on the piano by Miss Ruth Flicker, charmed his audience with a group of songs.

"Get Off My Foot" was the title of an exceptionally fast moving skit by George Kent, Jr. and Henry Kohl.

The Kingston Triangle Club Quartet consisting of Drs. Julian and Julius Gifford, Ralph Gurney and Clarence S. Schoonmaker, made a fine appearance and provided plenty of good harmony which was thoroughly enjoyed. They were accompanied by Mrs. Marie Gifford on the piano.

An unusual and novel number was provided by Frank Oulton who wrote and presented a "Burlesque Third Degree in Rhymn" very ably assisted by John Dunn, William Heltzman, Don Dempsey, Robert Flynn, John Murphy and George Rich.

The Cherio Girls, a group of eight young ladies, proved a very popular act.

The program was brought to a close by the Blue Ridge Rangers in song and music.

Clarence S. Schoonmaker acted in a very gracious manner as master of ceremonies.

Kangaroo Rats Plant Crops

Giant kangaroo rats operate their own farms and grow their own foodstuffs in western Fresno and Kern counties, California. According to a scientific treatise submitted to the American Society of Mammalogists by a member of the University of California faculty, the rats cut furrow-like trenches in the ground, place the seeds, cover them, and later harvest the crop.

A clogged water system is the cause of overheating—of using more oil and gas—shortening the life of your motor—loss of pep and energy—stalling—expensive repairs—discomfort in driving—disagreeable odors—hard starting—etc.

Although a common trouble, overheating is a serious one and causes permanent damage to the motor. To avoid this and to offer a better service to our customers we have installed the latest method known to science for cleaning the entire cooling system of automobiles, by which we guarantee to free any clogged radiator.

May we suggest that now is the proper time for a Spring cleaning of the cooling system. Drop in any time and we will gladly service you.

Conner In Alleged Confession Charges Murder to Baessler

Alleged Confessions of Baessler and Conner, Charged with Uriah Quick's Murder, Lay Blame on each Other—Description of Alleged Murder.

Michael Conner, who with Anton Baessler is on trial for murder, first degree, for the killing of Uriah Quick last January, in an alleged confession made to Detective William F. Wagner on January 28 blamed Anton Baessler for the actual murder of Quick and described what he saw of the act. Baessler in his alleged confessions blames Conner.

According to Mr. Wagner, who is superintendent of the New York office of the Pinkerton National Detective Agency, Conner told him willingly what took place at Quick's place in Leibhardt that Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Wagner said that after Conner had told of his past history he said that he was at Baessler's last January. On the morning of January 22, a Sunday, he and Baessler went to Quick's place in the Baessler car around 7 or 8 o'clock in the morning for the purpose of taking Mary Fish to Kingston to see Mrs. Baessler who was ill in the hospital.

When they arrived at Quick's place Mr. Quick protested against Mrs. Fish leaving but finally consented on condition that she return in time to get dinner. The three came to Kingston and visited the hospital. Baessler and Mrs. Fish rode in the front seat of the car and Conner in the rear. After the visit here they went to Baessler's place at Kerhonkson where they remained a half hour and then went back to Quick's place arriving about 1 o'clock in the afternoon. Mary Fish prepared dinner. Conner and Quick sat in the dining room talking. They later ate dinner.

During the afternoon Baessler asked Mr. Quick if he had a jack and Quick said there was one in the barn. Baessler and Mary Fish went outside and remained about 10 minutes. At that time Conner said he and Quick were in the kitchen talking.

When Baessler and Mary returned Conner said he got up to get a drink of water from a bucket in the kitchen and turned his back to the others in the room.

His attention while drinking was called to the others when Quick said, "O Mamie Dear" and turning he saw Quick in the center of the room with Baessler in front of him. Baessler had hold of Quick's shirt with his left hand and in his right hand he held a black-jack. Conner said he saw Baessler hit Quick once. When he first turned around he saw blood on Quick's face. That was before he saw the one blow struck. Mary was in the kitchen at the time.

After seeing one blow struck Conner said, according to the detective, that he went outside on the stone step and stood there with his back to the kitchen door. After about two or three minutes he heard footsteps and turning he saw Mrs. Fish and Baessler carrying Quick out. They threw him down the cellar steps.

Conner said he did not attempt to stop Baessler from striking Quick and he had nothing to do with the act. He remained outside the house for perhaps an hour and during that time he saw through the open door of the kitchen both Mary Fish and Baessler cleaning up the kitchen.

Conner saw Baessler put a black-jack into a pail of water and wash it off and then put the jack in his pocket.

Then all three left in the car just as it was getting dark to go to Kerhonkson, the witness said he was told.

Conner told Mr. Wagner that there was no difficulty with the car on the way up to Quick's that morning but on the way home that night about a mile from the Quick place the car refused to run. Baessler went to a farm house and Conner and Mrs. Fish walked on down the road and were later picked up by a truck on which Baessler was riding.

Nothing was placed in the Baessler car so far as Conner saw on leaving Quick's place, said the witness.

Mr. Conner told Mr. Wagner that the act took place in the daytime and that it was just getting dark when they left for Kerhonkson.

At about 7 o'clock they arrived in Kerhonkson and Baessler took the black-jack and put it in the cellar where it was kept. For the past two years he had seen the jack there.

Mr. Wagner asked Conner what had prompted the attack on Quick and he said he did not know. He was sure the attack took place in the kitchen.

Conner also told the detective during the conversation that he had heard a conversation between Baessler and Mary Fish while they were driving along. Baessler said, "are you sure everything is all signed" and Mary Fish replied, "Yes".

Three weeks prior to January 22 Conner said Baessler had said that Mary Fish would soon have $2,200 but he did not at that time say where she was to get it.

In reply to questions put to him Conner said he had $31 when he left Baessler's that morning and he still had that amount when he returned. It was money he had saved from time to time from money paid him by Baessler, testified Mr. Wagner.

On the return to Kerhonkson that night Baessler told Conner to "Keep a closed mouth".

Tuesday following Baessler took Conner to Stamford. On arrival there Baessler refused to take Mike to Josiah Buck's place and left him in the village giving Conner $7.

At that time Baessler said he had to return to Kingston immediately to tell Mary Fish to go to Quick's place and discover the body and report it to the authorities, said the witness.

Conner gave $21 to Josiah Buck when he arrived there according to Wagner.

At that point Judge Traver again warned the jurors that any statements made by Conner, not in the presence of Baessler, in relation to any act of Baessler could not and must not be considered as evidence against Baessler. The same fact was true of statements made by Baessler in relation to Conner's part in the crime when Conner was not present when Baessler made the statement to the authorities.

Mr. Wagner said that Conner claimed the door of the Quick kitchen was opened when Mary and Anton went out after the jack and that it was warm and it was never closed again until after Quick's body had been thrown down the cellar steps and they left the place.

Mr. Wagner was questioned as to his conversation with Baessler on January 30. At that time Baessler was shown the revolvers and the black-jack and Mr. Wagner asked him if the revolvers and jack were the ones he had mentioned before and Baessler said they were. Wagner asked Baessler if the revolver was the one he had at one time claimed he threw into Metteahonis creek and Baessler said it was the one, he had not thrown it into the creek. The black-jack he said was the one he had mentioned before as having burned. He said he had not burned it. Mr. Wagner told of Baessler's story of having gone into the cellar and getting the revolvers and trying them out before they went to Quick's. He said one fired and the other did not and Conner asked for the one which had fired. Baessler told the detective that on the return they had put the guns and black-jack into the cellar but Tuesday after returning from Stamford he had put them in an egg box and put them under the floor of the garage where Sergeant Hopkins later discovered them.

Later Conner was brought into the room where Baessler was and Mr. Wagner asked him to repeat the statements he had made previously in relation to possession of the guns and black-jack. Baessler did so in the presence of Conner.

Much of the afternoon was taken up in cross examination of Mr. Wagner. Examined by Mr. Loughran, Conner's counsel, Mr. Wagner said Conner had said he knew nothing of the guns. Conner at all times had been willing to tell his story. There had been a slight change in Conner's story on January 30 from what it had been on January 28. Mr. Wagner said he had told Conner that his story differed from the stories told by the other two people and he said in reply to a question by Mr. Loughran that he might have told Conner he did not believe him. He denied he had a ruler or stick in his hands during the conversation with Conner.

"Did you not during that conversation say to Conner, 'I believe you are lying you murdering —— of a ——?'" asked Mr. Loughran. The witness said "I did not".

"Toward the end of the examination did you give Conner a cigar?" asked Mr. Loughran.

"I don't know, I may have. If I had two I did give him one. If I had only one cigar I did not give him a cigar," replied the witnes and there was a wave of laughter through the room which caused even the two defendants to smile. Wagner said he believed Conner was smoking a pipe.

Mr. Wagner said that Conner had told him that the first he saw the black-jack on Sunday was when Baessler was striking Quick.

Conner told of drinks having been had by all three and also Quick that day. Conner said he never owned a gun and never carried a black-jack.

Mr. Wagner was then cross examined by Mr. Lounsberry.

When the trio left Baessler's in the morning they took along two soda water bottles of liquor. Conner told the detective that one bottle was gin and one was apple whiskey. Conner had said nothing about drinks at Quick's on the first visit there and he had not told Wagner that Quick was drunk.

Mr. Wagner said during his story Conner had said that Quick protested Mary going away on January 22 because on the previous Sunday she had gone away and had not returned in time to get dinner.

"Did Conner say to you that Quick had said that if Mary left that day she need not return and that 'if you do it will be damn bad for the whole bunch of you'?" asked Mr. Lounsberry. Mr. Wagner said Conner had not mentioned that.

On the return from Kingston Conner told the detective that the bottles were about half empty and they were refilled. Mike said he had been drinking gin and Mary and Anton drank apple. It was about 12 or 1 o'clock that Sunday when they left to return to Quick's place. After arriving they drank from the bottles and Quick drank cider from a pitcher he got from the cellar.

He reiterated the facts of the crime as he had told it on direct examination as coming from Conner.

He said he was being paid $20 a day and subsistence while on this case and Mr. Simmons another operator received $15 a day and expenses. It was the usual charge.

There had been blood on Quick's face according to Conner when he first turned and saw Anton about to strike Quick the one blow he saw struck, said Wagner.

Judge Traver again warned the jury and charged them not to consider the statements made by Conner about Baessler's part in the crime as evidence against Baessler and also that the jury must not consider statements made by Baessler as to Conner's part in the crime as evidence against Conner.

Jailer Abram Molyneaux again took the stand when court reassembled at two o'clock Thursday afternoon in the Quick murder case and underwent a rather extended cross-examination by Roger Loughran, attorney for defendant Michael Conner and LeRoy Lounsberry, representing the other defendant, Anton Baessler.

Mr. Loughran questioned him particularly about the trip, accompanied by Baessler, to Catsbak hill and then to the place in the woods where it is contended the pots, kettles, cloths and other articles had been placed by Baessler following the clean-up of the Quick home after the murder. The place was about half a mile beyond the new concrete bridge on the road to Samsonville and beyond the Quick home.

He was also asked about his testimony that Conner had said that he wanted to make a change in his original statement that Baessler had said to Mrs. Fish, as the three were on their way from Kerhonkson to Quick's place, "Have the papers all been signed?" Conner said that the statement was incorrect in that the conversation took place on the road between the Quick place and the Kingston Hospital.

The witness listed a number of articles he noticed when he visited the Quick place, among them a dish of beans on the stove, a loaf of bread and a knife, two straight back kitchen chairs, the bench with a water pail standing on it. He went over the story of the search in the Baessler cellar for the blackjack, and Baessler's remark that he "must have burned it." He said that he had heard Baessler say on a number of occasions that the blackjack belonged to Mike Conner.

Attorney Lounsberry, in beginning his cross-examination of Mr. Molyneaux, referred to the People's exhibit No. 32, an envelope containing bills, which had been offered during the morning session but had been withdrawn. He asked that Judge Traver instruct the jury to disregard all evidence or testimony concerning the bills and the judge stated that he would so instruct the jury.

The witness was asked in detail about his trip to Kerhonkson on the evening of January 26, his visit to the Humiston undertaking parlors and later to the Baessler restaurant. Others there that evening were District Attorney Murray, Sergeant Hopkins and Trooper Lawson and Hal. P. Ross. The witness said that when he went to the restaurant, the rest of the party having preceded him, he sat down on a stool at the counter, not far from Baessler, who had come downstairs, and the latter asked him, "What happened to Uriah Quick." He did not answer him, nor did Trooper Lawson, to whom the same question was addressed shortly afterward.

Mr. Molyneaux testified that the party arrived in Kingston with Baessler about 2 o'clock in the morning, that the latter was taken to the finger print room at the court house and then to the district attorney's office and that he signed a statement somewhere around five o'clock. They all had breakfast at the Advance Restaurant. He was not sure whether the statement was signed before or after breakfast. He said Baessler was not taken to jail that night, did not sleep so far as he knew and later was taken back to Kerhonkson. Baessler was in an extremely high strung, nervous condition and got more nervous after they brought Conner in. He was examined by the jail physician and later, at his request Dr. Snyder visited him.

Mr. Lounsberry brought out the admission that Conner had changed his statement after he had been questioned. Asked as to whether Mr. Wagner, the detective, had procured the second statement the witness said he didn't know; he might have.

The matter of the search for the black-jack on January 27 was gone into at some length and the witness was asked if he had ever seen another black-jack in connection with the case. He answered no, but stated he had seen a "billy", made of wood, which he got from Preston Davis. District Attorney Murray remarked that he would produce the billy in question and did so. The witness identified it.

The witness was asked if he remembered the day when, in the course of his investigation of the case, he interviewed Daniel Becker at Kerhonkson. The attorney refreshed his memory by stating that he referred to the occasion when Molyneaux and Detective Simmons stopped their car in front of the Davis House at Kerhonkson and called to a man to come out; that the man, who was Decker, came out, got into the car and held a conversation with the two officers. The witness said he remembered the occasion.

SPECIAL MEETING OF HOLSTEIN CLUB MONDAY

A special meeting of the Ulster County Holstein Club will take place at the Grange Hall in New Paltz, Monday evening, May 15, at 7:30, standard time. At this meeting final settlement will be made for the recent sale conducted by the club, final arrangements will be made to send a county herd of cattle to the State Fair early in September and plans will be made for a fall consignment sale. Any other business that members may have to bring before the meeting will be discussed.

The Holstein Club now has more members than it has held since it was organized in 1929. It has been carrying on several major activities and is doing a great deal to advertise and improve the quality of cattle in the county. As a result of its activities numerous buyers of cattle have been brought into the county from long distances. Holstein owners who have not yet become members are particularly invited to the meeting Monday evening to affiliate with the organization. All members are also urged to attend, especially the consignors to the recent sale.
